

Dairy Animals Should Be Fitted For Fairs

You can't expect to drive a dairy animal up from the pasture a few days before the county, sectional, or state fair and win in competition with other animals properly fitted, says Fred M. Haig, professor of animal husbandry and dairying at State college. He knows because he has been judging livestock at fairs for the past 20 years.

"First of all, you must select the animals to be shown at least 10 to 12 weeks before the show," he advises. "The animals must be taught to lead and stand properly; there is little chance of winning if you have to pull the cow or calf around the ring."

"In fitting dairy animals, you should also consider what you are going to feed to get the best results. All competent judges discriminate against animals that are too fat. On the other hand, they must carry enough flesh to present a smooth, sleek appearance. A good grain mixture consists of equal parts of ground corn, ground oats, wheat bran, and linseed oil meal. The amount of this mixture to feed each animal depends on the age and condition of the animal."

"It is also necessary to keep the animals blanketed during the entire fitting period. Blanketing induces sweating, hastens shedding, keeps the hide clean, and makes the hair lie smoothly. Several times a day you should remove the blanket and brush the animal all over with a soft-bristled brush. Always brush the hair in the direction in which it grows."

Finally, Prof. Haig said that it is a distinct advantage for an animal to have a well balanced set of horns properly manicured. "If the horns are out of shape in young animals, they may be corrected by use of horn trainers."

No Fascist Salute for Prince Umberto

Even though his Belgian wife, Princess Marie Jose, snaps out the stiff-armed Fascist salute during ceremonies in Nuoro, Italy, Crown Prince Umberto—who has had several fits with the Black Shirts—seems to prefer the pre-Fascism military salute. The ceremonies were held in honor of cadets who fell in the recent Spanish civil war.

Lieutenant Wilson Receives Promotion

A recent dispatch from Washington reports that D. Grant Wilson, reserve officer on duty with the civilian conservation corps camp at Aquone, formerly from Tampa, Fla., has been promoted from the grade of second lieutenant to that of first lieutenant in the infantry reserve. Lieut. Wilson came to his present post last fall, and with Mrs. Wilson has made many friends in Franklin.

DOUBLED

Farmers have more than doubled their tree-planting activities since 1935, according to a report of the U. S. Forest Service, largely as a result of the Clarke-McNary Law.

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q. Is there any fertilizer value to tobacco stalks?
A. Green tobacco stalks when plowed under carry a certain amount of plant food, but the greatest benefit from plowing under the stalks comes from the destruction of insect pests. The suckers that grow on stalks left standing furnish a breeding place for millions of these pests which will attack the crop next season. Immediately after the harvest all stalks should be cut or plowed under. In this way the insects will be destroyed.
