State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

O. What are the best dates for planting winter hay crops?

A. In most parts of the state the best time for seeding barley, rye, vetch, Austrian winter peas, and crimson clover is between September 15 and October 15, Oats should be planted between October 1 and November 1, and wheat about 15 days later than oats. Plant seed that is high in purity and germination and use a liberal supply. Whenever possible, the seed should be put in with a grain drill as this method gives a better stand than the broadcasting.

Q. How much silage should be used daily to the dairy cow?

A. The average cow will consume about three pounds of silage daily for each 100 pounds of live weight. This means that a 1,000 pound cow will eat about 30 pounds of silage each day. Where there is a sufficient quantity of silage and legume hay the grain ration will be smaller and the cost of milk production reduced to a certain extent. Excellent results have been secured by feeding the grain ration mixed in the manger with the silage and many good dairymen are following this practice. Q. When should lespedeza be cut for seed? The Korean variety may be gut for seed about the first of October and the other varieties just after the first hard frost. After cutting, the Korean is left in the barn or in stacks for a few weeks and then threshed with a grain separator. Seed from the other varieties are harvested with a seed pan and the straw left on the land for soil improvement. Those growers who have combines, will find them probably more effective than any other implement for harvest-

Most Farms Provide Food Storage Spots

ing the seed.

Most farms provide plenty of choice spots where the family can store ample supplies of fruits and vegetables for the winter, says H. R. Niswonger, horticulturist of the State College Extension Service.

A cellar, basement, attic, or pit are favorable places to store apples, pears, root crops, dried beans or peas, onions, pumpkins, and squash, However, Niswonger warned, cellars containing furnaces are usually not satisfactory for fruits and root crops as the atmosphere is too warm and dry. Also, cabbage should not be stored in a cellar since the odor will penetrate through the house.

On the outside, hot beds or cold frames provided with a covering of boards and dirt may be utilized for storing root crops such as beets, turnips, and carrots, and for celery, collards, and cabbage.

Outdoor pit storage in a well drained location is very satisfactory for storing root crops and straw and dirt. potatoes. Several small pits should be constructed instead of one large

Extension Service Makes Annual Report Available Results of Extension work with farmers from ocean-fringed Dare county to mountainous Cherokee are contained in the 1938 annual report of the State College Extension service, just from the press. The report explains work undertaken and completed in all farming and home-making subjects and is profusely illustrated. Brief statistical summaries show the amount of work completed in each phase of the work. Compilation of the activities of the 270 farm and home agents and their assistants, as well as the 70 subject matter specialists and administrators, goes to make up the report. The extension service has at least one representative in each

North Carolina county. The report shows that a planned extension program was conducted in 2,471 of the state's 2,895 communities. During the year, the agents made 179,223 individual visits to 89,515 different farmsteads and conducted 27,148 method demonstration meetings which attracted 579,241 persons.

A summary indicates that Extension workers in 1938 influenced 256,139 of North Carolina's 300,967 families and 32,177 other families. The program resulted in definite changes on 228,749 farms.

Some of the progressive steps taken were: major adjustments of cropping systems, development of a better livestock and poultry program, parasite and disease control, home beautification, better crops and greater yields, and soil, timber, and human conservation.

The report pointed out that responsibility for the educational work and administrative leadership of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program were handled by Extension forces in 1938.

MICAH: A MESSENGER OF SOCIAL JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Micah 3:1-12; 6:6-8. GOLDEN TEXT—What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?-Micah 6:8.

We demand human rights, social justice, and economic security. Corrupt judges and bribe-taking officials must be put out of office. Landlords must not squeeze every penny out of their tenants; loan sharks must be put out of business; the rich must not oppress the poor. The Church must have ministers with a real message and must share in the solution of the problems of human-

No, we did not copy that paragraph out of today's newspaper. It is the message that the prophet Micah preached more than 2,500 years ago. And what's more, he not only presented theories, but he knew how to accomplish his purpose of real social justice. It is time some of those who talk about this subject got back to the Bible and really learned how it can be done.

1. Social Injustice (3:1-10). The inhumanity of man toward man is not something that just happened. There are fundamental reasons for such conditions, and they are the same in our time as in Micah's day. The responsibility rests squarely on the failure of our national and spiritual leaders to perform their God-given tasks. 1. Rulers without Judgment (3:14,

The obligation of anyone who is given or who seeks public office is to know judgment. This does not mean only that he is to have a general knowledge of the law and its technicalities; he is to know justice in his very heart, to love it, and to see that it is always rightly administered. The leaders of Israel had woefully failed, in fact had deliberately departed from the standards of God, and Micah exposed them in plain, dramatic, well-spoken words. While verses 2 and 3 are not to be taken literally, they do in striking figurative speech describe just what unscrupulous politicians do to an unsuspecting people.

2. Prophets with a False Message

In such a day might one not expect God's messengers to have a word of condemnation for the leaders and of comfort for the people? Not only did they keep quiet about the sin and corruption which they saw about them, but they actually wealthy "church members" in their sin by saving, "All is well," Such religious leaders have not altogether perished from the earth.

Let ministers of God be like Micah, who is described in verse 8 as a man of judgment and justice, because he was "full of power by the Spirit of the Lord."

II. Social Security (3:11, 12; 6:

6-8). No, that idea was not discovered by the politicians of the 1930's. It has been in the plan of God from the beginning; in fact only in Him is there any real national, personal, or social security. Micah skillfully unmasked false security and revealed the way of true security. 1. False Security and Divine Judgment (3:11, 12). When the heads of a nation "judge for reward" and its religious leaders "teach for hire" and its prophets "divine for money" (v. 11), there is no use to talk piously about God being with us. The prophecy of verse 12 was fulfilled three times-by the Chaldeans in 586 B. C., by Titus in A. D. 70, and under Hadrian in A. D. 135. God always keeps His promises, even if the promise be a promise of judgment.

2. True Security and Divine Blessing (6:6-8). God is not to be propitiated by the offerings of material things as a sacrifice or by any outward profession of piety. He looks at the heart.

Verse 8 is a remarkable and beautiful epitome of God's requirement of man, namely, justice, kindness, and humility; but note that this is the requirement of the law, and one which no man can possibly fulfill apart from Christ. It is evident folly for men to quote this verse as did the agnostic Thomas Huxley and others, to justify themselves for not responding to the claims of the gospel of Christ, Only Christ can make any man capable of true justice, constant kindness, and genuine humility. Only thus can we meet the demands of the law of God.

Real social justice and security will come only as there is a recognition of Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord by the leaders, by the prophets and by the people.
