NEW HOURS FOR HUDSON LIBRARY

Until further notice the Hudson Library will be open Tuesday and Saturday afternoons from 3 to 5 o'clock.

CHAPEL PROGRAMS AT HIGH SCHOOL

The chapel program at Highlands school every Friday morning has for the past several years been an important part of the school work.

Prof. O. F. Summer, principal, says "the school has found that the children are more interested in their school work after having had an opportunity to present a public program; that the stage experience which they gain is worth much to them in everyday life, and that quite often the programs are prepared almost entirely by the pupils themselves, the teachers acting in a supervisory capacity."

Another long established custom is beginning of the school day in each room with a devotional program lasting 15 or 20 minutes.

Mr. Summer further states that "the school is endeavoring to put into practice those things which will be for the betterment of the town and community. The teachers and principal always welcome suggestions and ideas from the patrons of the school, as many worthwhile ideas have come in this manner in the past, and it is felt particularly at this time that the community and school should work closely together."

647 Forest Fires Reported In WNC For First 6 Months

Warden Fred Bryson Asks Citizens To Help To Prevent Fires

During the first six months of 1940, 647 forest fires damaged timberlands in Western North Carolina, according to a report from J. Fred Bryson, county forest warden.

Only 14 of the 647 fires were caused by lightning, while 633 were man-caused and could have been prevented.

These 633 man-causes fires cost the state and counties of Western North Carolina thousands of dollars in damage in timber, to say nothing of the effect that fires have on soil erosion, flood control, and the natural beauty of the forests.

Brush burning fires were responsible for 172 of the forest fires, or in other words 172 fires were caused through carelessness or bad judgment in burning brush, sedge and various other forms of debris.

Already, with the first signs of fall, the grasses in the forests are dying and the foliage is losing its glossy green color and beginning to fall. Therefore, the floor of the forest will soon be covered with a layer of dead and highly inflammable material subject again to the risk of more man-caused forest fires.

Citizens of Macon county can render valuable assistance to their county, state and forest warden organization in bringing about a decrease in the losses from forest fires, Mr. Bryson said. Here are a few of the ways in which they can help:

- 1. Don't toss a lighted cigarette or match out of your car. If you do so, your cigarette and match might land in inflammable materials causing a disastrous fire.
2. While hunting, be sure that your match and cigarette are fully extinguished before you throw them away. Also be sure that, when your pipe is emptied, the contents are completely extinguished.

- 3. In building warming and camping fires, be sure that you have complied with the state laws. To build such a fire, the state law requires that you clear away all inflammable and combustible material for a space of 10 feet surrounding the place where such fire is kindled and that the fire fully extinguished before leaving.
4. Before burning debris of any kind, secure a burning permit from your county forest warden or one of his authorized representatives. The state laws provide a fine of not more than $50 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days for violating of this regulation.

- 5. After securing your burning permit, notify your adjoining landowner that you intend to do such burning.
6. Maintain careful competent watch over your fire and never leave your fire until it is completely out.
7. Never burn near the woods or where fire can reach the woods when conditions are dangerously dry.

Safety Lessons By HOCUTT

With several thousand men at work on North Carolina highways this fall, the Highway Safety Division this week called the attention of all Tar Heel motorists to some of the dangers incident to highway construction and maintenance jobs.

The repairing of highways damaged by the recent floods, together with the normal construction and maintenance activity, will result in an unusual volume of work on state highways this fall, Hocutt said, and this will mean that motorists will need to be more alert than usual.

In the first place, all this highway work will necessitate thousands of men being at work daily on the same highways over which hundreds of thousands of motor vehicles will be operating. And unless motorists employ courtesy, caution and commonsense and slow down when they see a flagman or a "Men Working" sign, some of these highway workers may be killed or injured, the safety director stated.

But highway construction and maintenance work does not present hazards to the workmen alone, he pointed out, for there are certain dangers incident to this work which will confront the motorist. Drivers on the road at night should be alert for warning signs and flares marking the approach to road construction and repair projects, and particularly the approach to temporary wooden bridges where new bridges are under construction or old ones are being widened. A driver who is going too fast and is not watching the roadway closely could easily smash into a barricade at such a point and have a serious smash-up.

"The state does all it can by putting up warning signs and setting out flares for the protection not only of its workmen but also of the traveling public," said Director Hocutt. "It is squarely up to the motorists of this state to heed these warning devices."

The State Forest Service Laws are going to be enforced. Those failing to comply with these laws are going to be prosecuted. We hope that through your cooperation this will not be necessary.
