Economist Chase Summarizes Roosevelt's Liberal Reforms

Perhaps the best summary of the liberal reforms of the Roosevelt administration is the one compiled by Stuart Chase, the prominent economist, which appeared in Thursday's Asheville Citizen:

Various banking laws to insure deposits, prevent insolvencies, make the Federal Reserve System more flexible, devalue the dollar, go off gold.

The operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in underwriting railroads, banks, insurance companies. (Started by Mr. Hoover.)

Two great credit corporations which took over private mortgages on the homes of several million urban and rural householders.

The Holding Company Act, designed to restrict corporation pyramids of the Insull variety.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, designed primarily to protect investors.

The Public Works Administration which advances money to states and cities for schools, highways, hospitals, docks, tunnels and other public improvements.

The Works Project Administration, which employs workers who would otherwise need relief allowances.

Various conservation and flood-control projects—multiple-purpose dams, the Central Valley of California project, Grand Coulee, Boulder; the TVA—a huge experiment in regional planning.

The CCC camps for young men.

The Rural Electrification Administration. Cheap power for farmers.

The vast agricultural program for keeping farmers afloat, with subsidies, conservation payments, marketing facilities, credit. This includes the Farm Security Administration, with its aid to down-and-out farmers, and the food-stamp plan, now distributing surplus food-stuffs in more than 100 cities.

The housing program, primarily for low-income groups.

The youth program, to find work or schools for unemployed young people.

The Wagner Act to encourage collective bargaining, and the National Labor Relations Board to administer the act.

The Wages and Hours Act.

The Social Security Act, providing old-age pensions and unemployment insurance.

The control of the bituminous-coal industry.

The enforcement of anti-trust laws under Thurman Arnold. Its aim: lower prices, more production.

The Hull trade treaties.

The Good Neighbor policy toward Latin America.

The encouragement of musicians, painters, actors, through the various Federal Arts Projects.

The statistical and economic studies of the National Resources Committee and the TNEC. Their problem: why are we in this jam and how can we get out of it?

Heads Sheriffs

Chatham county's Sheriff G. H. Andrews (above) is the newly elected president of the North Carolina Sheriffs association. He succeeded Sheriff C. David Jones of New Hanover. In a letter to State Director Edgar H. Bain, President Andrews commended the Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors committee for its "outstanding and efficient service" in routing the state of more than 100 undesirable beer outlets as a part of the "clean up or close up" campaign.

There's Winter Work In Gardens, Orchards

Plan now for your next year's garden, and prepare for planting early vegetable plants in February and March, advises H. R. Niswonger and L. P. Watson, horticulturists of the N. C. State college extension service.

They point out that November, December and January are not regarded generally as important for garden and orchard work, but there are many necessary things that can be done to best advantage during the winter months. The home garden and orchard do not demand a great amount of time, but they do require systematic planning.

The Extension specialists make the following suggestions: Broadcast manure to be turned over in November or disced in early in the spring. If the garden is on clay soil, break it in November to improve the physical condition. Repair fences or build new ones if the garden is in a new location.

Provide extra space in tobacco plant beds for growing tender vegetable plants. Although a hot bed is not a necessity, it will prove to be a profitable investment for growing early plants to be transplanted later.

Prune and spray all fruit trees and grape vines. Peach trees not treated for borers in October should have the borers removed, row by row. Cut posts and stakes and place conveniently to be used next summer to support running beans, tomatoes, and small fruits.

INCREASING

The demand for farm products by consumers has been increasing in recent months as general business conditions and purchasing power have picked up, reports the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The chart at the left shows graphically how North Carolinians share in their $100,000,000 Tourist Industry. Since these groups must spend this money for their needs, this sum is quickly distributed through all lines of business and agriculture. Everybody benefits.

North Carolina's Tourist Dollar is shared by Everybody

Stimulated by the Advertising Program of the Department of Conservation and Development, a $100,000,000 Tourist Industry in which everybody shares is flourishing in North Carolina.

On the basis of conservative estimates by the Department checked against findings of the U. S. Department of Commerce and the U. S. Travel Bureau, the $100,000,000 which visitors spend in North Carolina annually is distributed in accordance with the above chart.

Since all of these groups must spend this money for their own needs, the huge bonus which visitors pay annually to enjoy the attractions of North Carolina is quickly distributed among all lines of business and agriculture. Everybody shares in the benefits. The Advertising Campaign was launched in 1937. At the end of the first year, it was estimated that automobile tourists spent $64,000,000 in North Carolina.

At the end of the second year, $100,000,000 was pouring into North Carolina from this source. If you would like additional facts on what the North Carolina Advertising Program is doing for the State, write
