Mrs. H. C. Moses Visits Six Children In California

Mrs. H. C. Moses of Ellijay left last week for San Diego, Calif., where she will remain for an indefinite time.

The Moses family is an interesting example of Macon county's contribution to the population of the far west. Mr. Moses, a prominent farmer of the Cullasaja section, died several years ago and this is Mrs. Moses' second trek across the continent to visit their children in that part of the world.

"I do not know when I will come back," said Mrs. Moses, "of course I may never return, I told Dr. Rogers I was going out there where I would not need a doctor since he was going to the legislature. But of course there is no place in the world as pretty as the mountains of Macon county, and I may come back next year."

Six of Mrs. Moses' nine children are in the west. Ansel T. Moses who has been with the navy for 20 years, is now stationed on the "Savannah" in Honolulu as a teacher of gunnery. Mrs. L. M. Hulme and Mrs. Julia Peterson, two daughters, live at El Centro in the Imperial Valley and Paul L. Moses is a school teacher in Ontario, Calif. Another daughter, Jeannette E. Moses, who lives on a ranch near San Diego has represented that district in the state legislature for three terms and expects to be re-elected along with other democratic candidates, state and national, at the polls on Tuesday.

Mrs. Hester Bruschi, wife of a prominent dentist in San Diego, is another daughter whom Mrs. Moses will visit.

The remaining three sons are farmers in the Cullasaja section on the home place.

Young Southard Boy Raises Big Potatoes

A number of our subscribers have brought giant and multiple specimens of a bumper Irish potato crop in Macon county this year. We regret that we have not the names of all of these.

The last sample brought in Tuesday by Alec L. Southard, Jr., is a credit to this young farmer of 11 years, a sixth grader, and to the certified Green Mountain seed used. His crop from two and a half bushels planted was 52 bushels.

DRIVERS, HEED YOUR SIGNS

Accident Rate Could Be Reduced If Drivers Knew Signs

Pointing out that tens of thousands of North Carolina motorists do not know the meaning of the various types of warning signs which the state places alongside the highways, Ronald Hocutt, director of the highway safety division, this week explained the meanings of the more common types of warning signs encountered by drivers.

The three types of signs seen most frequently, Hocutt said, are diamond-shaped signs, square signs, and octagonal or eight-sided signs, all with black lettering on a yellow background.

Diamond signs mean reduced speed. These signs are used where permanent physical dangers always require a reduction of speed for safety, Hocutt said. Such signs may designate curves, dangerous intersections, sudden dips in the road, or narrow bridges.

Square signs mean caution, the safety director explained. These signs are used to draw your attention to road conditions requiring you to drive with extreme care. For example, men working in the roadway, school zones or other places on the highway that require more than ordinary care on the part of drivers are marked by square-shaped signs.

Octagonal or eight-sided signs mean STOP, Hocutt emphasized. These signs are generally found near dangerous intersections and junctions.

"A stop sign means that you must bring your car to a complete halt," Hocutt said. "Slowing down is not enough. And after stopping you should use great care in entering the main road."

Then, of course, there are round signs, which mean railroad crossings. Round signs always mean stop, look and listen. Even at crossings where the law does not require you to stop, good sense suggests that you stop, Hocutt suggested.

"North Carolina's accident rate could be reduced materially," he added, "if every driver in this state understood and heeded every highway sign erected by the state. Motorists must learn that diamond signs mean reduced speed, square signs mean caution, and octagonal signs mean stop. And the sooner they learn this, the safer they will be."

THE WORD "EYE" Is mentioned more than 800 times in the Bible.
