Letter From London To American Red Cross

The following letter has been received by Mrs. J. E. Perry, local chairman of production of the Macon chapter of the American Red Cross, from headquarters in Washington, which she requests be printed to give an idea of the need in Britain for the garments that are being made:

Lady Redding, head of the Woman's Volunteer Corps in London, writes in part, as follows:

"We are living such a frightfully artificial life and yet so near fundamentals it is difficult to get the right perspective at the moment. One thing remains of concrete stability and that is the wonderful help we are getting from you."

"I was down the other day in one of the very poor Boroughs. Our Centre there had been bombed and was a complete shambles and I went there to inaugurate the new premises. After the ceremony I was asked to go to the Town Hall where we had been lent an immense hall as a clothing centre and I wish you could have seen the pride which each worker in turn showed, in dealing with the American gifts which were piled up ready to do their work or relief. I could not help thinking that the lady in the Pittsburgh Chapter who had knitted the red jumper, I saw on top of the pile and examined with admiration, would have been thrilled if she could have heard what people with tired eyes and no possessions were saying about her knitting and the gift she had sent."

"The warm stuff is absolutely perfect."

"As you know, London remains the centre of the enemy's operations, although it is still quite true to say that the whole of Great Britain is a battlefield, as intermittent raids on various parts of the country take place day and night. The Prime Minister stated the other day that four-fifths of the total casualties from air raids for the whole country, were London casualties. Hospital trains laden with the more serious cases leave London daily for the provinces, as practically every London hospital has been bombed to a more or less degree, some having been put entirely out of action and they now act as casualty clearing stations retaining only the very serious cases. This also applies to clinics and treatment centres. The consequence is that everything possible is being made mobile; canteens, field kitchens and all kinds of repair and service squads take the place of semi-permanent quartering of other wards."

Dr. Brinkley, Goat Gland Specialist, Bankrupt

News comes from San Antonio, Texas, that Dr. John R. Brinkley, of goat gland fame, has been adjudged a bankrupt in Federal District court.

Dr. Brinkley, who is a native of Jackson county and owns a large farm in that county, built up a huge fortune by advertising his cures and broadcasting over his own radio station—just over the border in Mexico—his hospital, operations and prescriptions.

SOFTENED

The blow that Europe's war dealt American farm prices last spring is being softened by resurging domestic demand for farm commodities as the United States rearms.

Funeral Of Mrs. Mason Held Last Sunday

Funeral services for Mrs. Addie Crawford Mason, 81, were held at the Cowee Baptist church last Sunday afternoon. The Rev. George Davis, pastor, officiated, assisted by the Rev. George A. Cloer, the Rev. Lester Sorrels and the Rev. T. T. Welch, all Baptist ministers of Macon county. Interment was in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Mason died at her home on Mason branch in the Cowee township on Saturday afternoon, following an illness of five weeks. Death was caused by pneumonia.

A native of Jackson county, Mrs. Mason was born on March 8, 1859, the daughter of the late Samuel and Martha Crawford. She was married to James Mason of this county, who preceded her in death. She was a member of the Cowee Baptist church.

The pallbearers, all grandsons, were, Carroll Mason, Grady Jones, L. R. Mason, Frank Jones, W. B. Jones and R. L. Jones.

Surviving are three children, Mrs. Charles Bryson, Miss Leatha Mason, and Lee Mason, all of West's Mill; five sisters, Mrs. Sarah Holland, Mrs. Louisa Dills, Mrs. Josie Holland, Mrs. Beth Webb and Mrs. Lena Holland, and one half-brother, a Mr. Hanes.
