MRS. HAMPTON PERRY PASSES IN CHARLESTON, S. C.
Word was received here last Saturday of the death of Mrs. W. Hampton Perry at her home in Charleston, S. C., on Thursday. Mrs. Perry was a native of England and had owned a summer home, "Highfield", on the Wall-halla Road here for a great many years. She is survived by a daughter and one son, Mrs. George Saussy of Columbia, S. C., and John Perry of Charleston.

YOUNG PEOPLE ATTEND PRESBYTERIAN RALLY

At the Presbyterian young people's rally in Asheville on April 6th, the Highlands church was represented by nine young people, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney McCarty, adult advisers, and Rev. H. T. Bridgman, pastor, making a total of twelve, which except for Montreat college with thirty, was the largest number from any one church. Hendersonville was the only other church having as many. Approximately a hundred and sixty young people from over Western North Carolina were in attendance at this rally.

Trees Seen As Vital In Carrying On War

Trees will help to win the war, so R. W. Graeber, urges farmers to make wise use of their woodlands.

For instance, he said, fuel wood on the farm, if used in place of other fuels, would release ships and railroad cars now needed to haul these other fuels for transporting military supplies and necessary war materials. However, fuel wood should come from cull trees, tops of trees cut for sawlogs, and dead, seriously injured or suppressed and unthrifty trees not suitable for veneer logs, box bolts, and other special products.

Not only can wood be used on the farm to replace oil and coal, but wood could replace metal posts in fence-building, thus saving the metal for other purposes more necessary in the prosecution of the war.

Graeber said the farmer cannot be sure of a demand for all the fuel wood he can cut. Therefore, he should plan his cut so that he himself can use wood in the place of other fuels and supply those to whom he knows he can sell wood. Present indications, however, are that increased amounts of fuel wood will be needed this year and in 1943.

The State College forester said fuel wood can best be harvested during slack periods on the farm. Fuel wood yields more heat when it has had six months or more in which to air dry. In piling wood for air-drying, it should be stacked, not heaped, on high ground, preferably in an open yard to get the most air circulation.

Herbs Make Comeback As War Cuts Supplies

A revival of herb growing in North Carolina is foreseen by L. G. McLean, associate horticulturist of N. C. State College, because the war has shut off normal supplies of these culinary and medicinal plants.

Early settlers in the country brought with them a wide variety of herbs from Europe and used the plants extensively in the flavoring and for medicinal purposes. However, herb gardens gradually became fewer as Americans depended increasingly on foreign markets for their supply.

McLean believes herbs to have potential importance in North Carolina as money crops, because the State affords likely growing conditions. Through the years, a steady demand has grown for certain herbs and the market could accommodate that amount.

The impact of war on the herb market is seen in the price paid for sage. Before the war, sage could be purchased ordinarily for five cents, a pound. Now, the price ranges from 65 cents to $2 a pound, depending on the quality.

Such plants as coriander, fennel, caraway, sage, anise, sunflower, mustard, angelica, dill, and pyrethrum can be grown successfully by farm people of North Carolina.
