For Fall Pig Crop

More Care Advised Composts May Relieve Fertilizer Shortage

With many valuable fertilizers cut off because of the war, North Carolina farmers can turn to conservation of fertilizer materials from minor sources and help relieve shortages, says Dr. E. R. Collins, extension agronomy leader of North Carolina State col-

Composts or mixtures are being made constantly through the rotting of leaves, twigs, roots, and other organic matter, Various substances may help sopply organic matter and also often supply nitrogen, phosphoric acid, potash and other elements needed by growing plants

"For example," Dr. Collins said, "in butchering hogs on the farm, various parts of the carcass are frequently wasted. These are valuable fertilizers. Kitchen waste is good for composts, too, if they cannot be fed to animals.

"Dry leaves, weeds, sweepings from the house and barn, coffee grounds, fruit peelings, soot and wood ashes are other examples,"

Compost may be made in number of ways, Dr. Collins said, the compost thoroughly. The outsie of the pile may be covered with soil.

"Where possible," the State man went on, "at least half of the material used should be manure, but if this quantity cannot be obtained, a small amount should be used to inoculate the heap with the bacteria of decomposition.

Where very fine material is descreened, and the parts which are not thoroughly broken down removed.

This Fall's bumper pig crop holds possibilities of increased trouble for North Carolina farmers unless they can give greater care and attention to each litter, says Dr. C. D. Grinnells, veterinarian of the Agricultural Experiment station at North Carolina State college.

More pigs generally mean less attention per pig, the veterinarian pointed out. Yet Fall weather conditions are ideal for a great number of swine disease complications

Every hog rouse should be disinfected thoroughly, well bedded, and ventilated properly.Precautions should be taken to prevent pigs from piling up at night, with consequent chilling in the morning.

Sunless days in the late Fall increase the danger from rickets and vitamin deficiency diseases. Rations should be checked with this danger in view, the State College livestock autority advised, Wet weather also increases the threat of pneumonia and influenza. Proper housing and prompt control measures in case of sickness are the best steps against these two destructive killers.

Dr. Grinnells also observed that there has been an increase in Fall outbreaks of hog cholera in the past few years. In view of this apparent upward trend in the cholera cycle, all Fall pigs should be vaccinated by a veterinarian around weaning time.

"There is no object in having larger farrowings and ending up with fewer pigs saved from each litter," Dr. Grinnells said. "Yet this may happen easily on many farms unless the owners make up their minds to watch their sired, well-rotted compost may be Fall pig crop more closely, and to take every precaution to overcome the various diseases and risks which always threaten "
