Frying Hamburgers By 100 Mayor Cobb's Picnic Feat

Stores Close To Entertain Visitors; 300 Attend

If you don't believe frying hamburgers by the hundred is a job, just ask Mayor Wilton H. Cobb, who by actual count fried more than that number at the picnic held at Cliffside Lake last week, when approximately three hundred Highlands people and summer visitors gathered at the lake for their first community picnic.

The idea of a community picnic as a courtesy to summer visitors originated with Charles J. Anerson of Highlands Drugstore. His idea was quickly and enthusiastically entertained by the business houses and hotels to the extent that 1:30 o'clock Tuesday saw all places of business tightly closed and practically everyone off for an afternoon of gaiety at Cliffside. The community spirit began with the sharing of cars so that all might have transportation with a minimum amount of gasoline. The children enjoyed the novelty of a truck ride to and from the park as well as the park's playground facilities.

R. R. King of King's Inn (Bob to his hundreds of friends) was principal speaker and also led the singing of "America." The stillness caused by the practical desertion of the town proved too much for Ed Rogers, the village cop, and he was seen taking a nap in his car on Main street; the enjoyment of his snooze being evidenced by the slight snore emanating from the parked car.

Everyone felt the picnic gathering well worth while, and are looking forward to its repetition next year.

The mayor, the town board of commissioners and the sponsors of the community picnic have expressed thanks in the following manner to all who helped to make the occasion a success:

"To the merchants and business men of Highlands and to our visitors who made the first community picnic at Cliffside lake a success and to the Forest Officials at Franklin, we express our deepest appreciation. It was unanimously voted that this picnic be made an annual affair at the end of the season, and we are looking forward to the coming one. To see so many people as were at this picnic mixing and mingling and doing as they pleased, makes one feel that America is worth fighting for all the more."

Greenville Air Center

(We are indebted to Dr. Killian who is serving as a surgeon at the Greenville Air Base for this interesting clipping.—Editor).

Greenville's importance as a military aviation center has grown swiftly thus far in 1942 and is destined to grow more.

First and foremost, of course, is the Greenville Army Air Base, activated early in the year and already one of the most important all-purpose bases in the country.

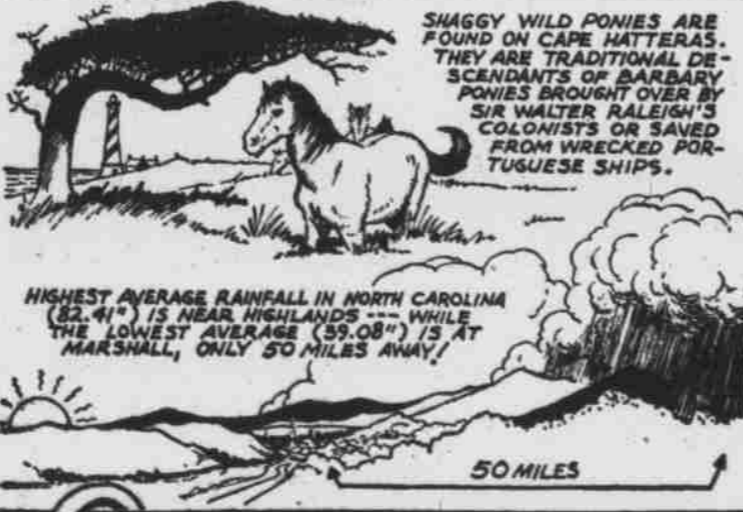

Next to be established, and with its personnel quartered in a spreading tent city at the airport, is the Air Service Training Detachment, where many men are becoming experts in airplane maintenance and repairing under field conditions.

Third, and also at the airport, is the Army's new glider school, the student personnel of which is quartered at Furman University.

Life in Greenville, never dull, is enlivened now that the air above it affords spectacles of planes of various types and gliders, and the community is proud that it is connected with so important a contribution to the winning of the war.
