Old Age Benefits And Survivors Insurance Not Affected By Farm Wages

D. W. Lamert, manager of the Asheville office of the social security board, said this week that persons who are receiving old age and survivors insurance benefits may continue to receive such benefits and at the same time earn maximum wages in agriculture work.

Mr. Lambert said that although the social security act prohibits the payment of benefits to anyone who receives wages of $15 or more per month, in a job that is covered by the act, this ruling does not apply to farm labor, because agricultural labor is not covered by the act.

Beneficiaries under the old age and survivors insurance system, who receive checks from the government every month, found a leaflet with their November checks which points out these facts:

"Farm labor is urgently needed. You can help your government win the war if you will accept farm work. The extra money you earn will not stop your monthly old age and survivors insurance payments, because agricultural work is not covered by the social security act.

"Boys and girls who are 16 or 17 years old who wish to extend their summer vacations in order to work on a farm may continue to receive their monthly insurance benefits while so working. However, they must notify the social security board office of the date they expect to return to school.

State College Hints For Farm Homemakers

By RUTH CURRENT

It has been said that truke, duck or chicken can have a glossy coat if there's a sprinkling of sugar after the usual rubbing with butter, salt and pepper before roasting. Someone should have thought of that when there was plenty of sugar available but, after all, a little sprinkling won't drain the precious supply, now will it? You may like it.

Cakes made with honey sometimes seem less light and fluffy than those made with sugar. Age them, and they become moist and flavorful.

The coffee you buy now is probably in a paper bag. Think nothing of it. Better be glad you were able to get any at all. Its predicted that by Christmas time all available coffee will be packed in bags. Just transfer it to an old coffee tin on a glass jar with a metal screw top.

The very unfortunate homemaker who "stocks up" will be mighty sorry in a month from now that the coffee tastes as it's been poured through someone's sock! And that's exactly what will happen to hoarders.

Yes coffee goes stale on the shelf and with that thought in mind, these hints should be observed religiously: (1) Buy coffee as your rationing book permits. Don't fuss. (2) Buy the right kind for your coffee maker. The wrong type means needless waste. (3) Measure loffe accurately. (4) Prepare no more than you think you'll need. (5) Serve it as soon as it's made, if possible. (6) Save all leftover coffee. Use in cooking. It is especially delicious in cakes, cookies and pudding. It's called mocha then.

Keep these points in mind for the months ahead and remember that coffee rationing means that everyone will get a share of what there is. Remember, too, that cargo ships, formerly bringing coffee, are now taking war materials to our fighting boys. Let's forget our coffee nerves!

Share-The-Meat Program Launched In Macon

A nutrition committee has been appointed by Guy Houk, chairman of Civilian Defense, to serve in an informative capacity in regard to the new voluntary rationing of meats. Those serving are Sam Mendenhall, county agent; Mrs. Florence S. Sherrill, home agent and Miss Gladys Maxwell of the Farm Security Administration.

This committee will ask for volunteer assistants, using the same county organizations which have so ably put over the scrap metal and fat campaigns.

The government has announced shortages in the better cuts of fresh meat on account, largely, of the increased amounts being consumed by the armed forces, both at home and abroad. All families will be asked to use not more than two and a half pounds a person a week of these cuts. There is no shortage of ground meats, liver and cheaper cuts, it is stated. The above committee will distributed information in regard to this program.
