Trained Women

Needed In Victory Effort Gov't Pays Expenses

RALEIGH, Dec. 8.—Failure of enough North Carolina women to prepare themselves for work essential to the victory effort is causing a serious reduction in enrollment in training courses financed by the Federal government, Director Edward W. Ruggles of the N. C. State College Extension Division declared today.

Citing the War Manpower Commission's edict that the coming year will see millions of additional women required in war work, Director Ruggles said too few North Carolinians are taking advantage of the free courses which will qualify them for war work industries and essential government activities.

"Women must prepare themselves for the fast-approaching period when they will be called on in increasing numbers to enter the war production program," Ruggles declared. Some of the jobs open to women pay as high as $2,000 annually to start. Ruggles had a request today for five women to take drafting jobs paying $135 to $150 monthly to begin. He was unable to fill the request because the hundreds of women who have completed the short courses at State College already are holding down essential jobs.

Nearly a score of short courses have been scheduled to start in a new series next month, Ruggles said, urging women to write to his office for a new bulletin describing the courses, which last from 10 to 20 weeks.

All expenses of the training except students' subsistence and textbooks are paid by the Federal government. In most courses, high school graduation is the only educational requirement.

Courses in the new series will include aerial bombardment protection, aircraft inspection, architectural and marine drafting, chemical testing and inspection, engineering drawing, engineering fundamentals, fabric inspection and testing, fundamentals of machinery, industrial safety engineering, materials testing and inspection, production supervision, war production engineering and contracting, radio communication and surveying.

In addition, courses are available in aircraft sheetmetal work, welding and machine shop practices.

Survey Shows 78% Buy Bonds And Stamps

Washington, D. C.—A recent survey by the Gallop poll revealed that 78 percent of Americans have bought War Bonds or Stamps.

Reporters for the poll asked a representative cross-section of the voting population this question:

"Do you happen to have bought any war bonds or stamps?"
 The result was:
 Yes—78 percent.
 No—22 percent.

Dr. George H. Gallup, head of the Institute of Public Opinion, said the findings were splendid testimony to the effectiveness of the Treasury Department's War Savings Campaign.

Seeking the answer to the failure of one out of every five adult Americans to buy War Bonds or Stamps, Dr. Gallup made a further study and found that two large segments of the population—the lower income group and farmers—are responsible for this situation.
