The United States now has the most powerful Navy the world has ever seen. But, the Navy's job did not end with the surrender of Japan. There's still a big job to be done. The Hon. John G. Winant And The Bible

The Hon. John G. Winant, Ambassador to Great Britain, and a member of the Laymen's National Sponsoring Committee of the Worldwide Bible Reading program, declares the Bible is the source for material known and understood by people in all countries. From London he has written to the American Bible Society: "On Thanksgiving Day, 1944, we had a service at Westminster Abbey in which I was asked to read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving Proclamation.

"On three Thanksgiving Days now the British have invited the Americans to hold their service in the Abbey. In the past British people probably have not thought much about this American holiday. Now there are many Americans here who have told them of the origin of Thanksgiving and the customs which have grown up around it. But through our religious observance of the day they have gained some understanding of its real significance.

"Today we are trying to find a basis for international understanding. We know that the human problems facing the many nations are not different, but variety in the ways we earn our living, in the languages we speak, in the schools we go to, and in the books we read, and in the manner of our thinking, sometimes makes it hard for us to speak a common language and to agree on a common denominator. If we read carefully and ponder well, we can find in the Scriptures strength and understanding to help us in our great task."
