RECORD TOURIST YEAR PREDICTED

Indications Are This Area To Be Filled During Summer Months

RALEIGH—North Carolina's travel industry is gearing itself for the biggest season in history, while plans for expansion this year and next are proceeding rapidly.

The industry, which brought an estimated $175,000,000 into the state in 1941, peak year, is anticipating as much—or more—in 1946, according to a survey made by the state advertising division. The expectation is based upon advance bookings, inquiries, and the predictions of national travel officials. And 1947, when new cars will be on the road and facilities increased, is already being hailed as a travel boom year.

One resort hotel in Western North Carolina already reports a complete sell-out for July and August, and many reservations for June. Another place, opening March 1 for the first time, reported it had "substantial" reservations immediately upon announcement of its early opening. Asheville hotel and tourist home operators predict a larger-than-ever season. Waynesville, Hendersonville, Blowing Rock and other places confirm the prediction. Inquiries to resort chambers of commerce are coming in earlier than usual.

Coastal resorts are having similar experiences. Nag's Head, Atlantic Beach, Wrightsville, Carolina and other beaches report unusually early activity. Even the lake resorts—White, Waccamaw and others—usually catering mostly to local vacationists, are feeling the pressure of vacation-bent Americans.

In an effort to partly meet the demand for accommodations, some resorts are announcing earlier openings this year. The state advertising division will concentrate on trying to spread the vacation season so as to relieve pressure on July and August facilities. Tourists are being told of the floral display in May and June, and the "leaf" season in the autumn.
