ILLNESS FAILS TO HALT BOY'S FARM PROJECTS

Bruce Keener, Recovering From Operation, Goes In For Chickens

Bruce Keener, member of the Otto 4-H club, isn't worrying about which comes first, the hen or the egg. Nor is he letting a handicap keep him from worth-while farm effort. Recovering from an operation this spring, he knew he wouldn't be able to do much heavy work on his father's farm, so he and his brother, Joe, worked out a chicken-raising partnership plan.

For taking care of the flock, Bruce is to get 150 of the 550 New Hampshire Red chicks—350 of which were sexed—they got in May.

The first thing the boys did was to take the old laying house and give it a quick, thorough repair job. They put new paper on the roof of the 11x26 foot building, lined the inside, poured a concrete floor, and built a brick brooder, at an estimated cost of $28 for labor and material.

Now a laying house, 20x60 feet, with two partitions dividing the house into three sections 20 feet square, is going up for Joe's portion. Bruce plans to convert the brooder

CATHOLIC GIRLS CONDUCT STREET-TEACHING MEET

Three young women from the Catholic Evidence Guild of Rosary college, River Forest, Ill., accompanied by two nuns from the college faculty, are here this week conducting street-teaching services.

house into a laying house for his hens.

Rigid culling of their flocks and contract sale of eggs to a hatchery, at a slightly higher price than most markets pay, are planned by the brothers.

Bruce, with returning strength, also planted three-quarters of an acre of beans this summer, handling both the cultivation and the insect control. He recently was elected a delegate to the 4-H short course at State college, the week of August 12.

J. E. Cabe, neighborhood leader in the Middle Creek section where the boys live, cites their example as illustrating what youngsters can do on the farm.
