Food Value Package: Potatoes pack good food values under their jackets. They are a good source of vitamin C, contain some B vitamins, iron and other important minerals, and starch.

Types to Buy: Best potatoes are firm and clean, have shallow eyes, are free from cuts, decay, or green spots. There are preferences, too, in line with the recipe followed. Mealy, flaky varieties are good for baking and mashing. Waxy varieties that hold their shape are best for salads and for creaming.

If selling potatoes, package those of uniform size and grade. Send to market only high quality potatoes with "eye appeal."

Cooking Tips: The best way to save food values is to cook potatoes in their jackets. And of the two ways of cooking them in their jackets, boiling conserves more vitamins than baking. If the potatoes are to be served parsleyed, mashed, creamed, hash-browned, or in salad, start them on their way boiled in their jackets. When raw potatoes are called for as in a scallop or soup, keep the peelings thin. Peel potatoes just before cooking. If allowed to soak, the potatoes lose some of their nutritional value. If they must be peeled ahead of time, put them in salted water. Serve them quick-cooked and steaming hot. The longer they stand exposed to the air, the more vitamin C they lose. Left-overs should be covered and kept in a cold place until you're ready to use them.

A simple way to restore the fresh flavor to canned orange juice or other canned citrus juices is to pour the chilled juice back and forth from one tumbler to another just before serving, citrus research chemists of the U.S.D.A. advise. This adds air which is naturally present in fresh juice but is removed during the vacuum canning process. Much of the "different" taste in properly canned juice, especially in orange juice as it comes from the can, is actually an airless taste which largely disappears when air is added.

Otto: Sue Howard, Mildred Cunningham, Mary Keener, Eugene Gray, Bruce Keener, Lois Slagle, Dudley Conley, and Roy Brown.

Slagle: Kenneth Crawford, Bruce Crawford, Wayne Harrison, Rosemary Huscisson, Grace Setser, Sara Ledford, and Connahee Nolen.

Urges Farmers
To Place Lime
Orders At Once

Limestone will be furnished to farmers through the 1947 agricultural conservation program on a "first come, first served basis," it was announced this week by Robert Fulton, chairman of the Macon County committee, in urging farmers to place their 1947 lime orders immediately.

"Only 355,200 tons of limestone have been offered for distribution through the 1947 program for the entire state," Mr.

Fulton continued. With an indicated increased demand for lime during the coming year, he pointed out that sufficient lime will not be available to fill all requests and that orders will be filled in the order they are placed with the Macon County Triple A office.

Contractors have agreed to furnish lime on a monthly basis. Any month's allotment that is not requested will be canceled and lost for the entire year, he said. By ordering lime now, farmers are assured of getting it in December of this year, or in January or February of 1947.
