

4 Steps Suggested In Keeping Farm Records

Planning for the year ahead is essential to any form of business. The farming enterprise requires this paper work no less than any other commercial activity in which the operator expects to make a profit.

Dr. R. E. L. Greene and W. H. pierce, agricultural economists with the N. C. Agricultural Experiment station, in recommending the keeping of farm records as a means of adequately planning for the year's activities, explain that there is more to recording the year's work than merely knowing if the farm made a profit or loss.

Intelligent action can be based only on fact, they say. Keeping farm records offers the simplest and most accurate means of achieving this.

Four steps are necessary in keeping a farm record, first of which is to take an inventory of all farm property at the end of the year. This means recording the number and value of all items of property the farmer owns or owes.

Second step is keeping a record of farm income and expenses. Often, the best means of doing this is to carry a small notebook on which can be recorded all transactions as they occur. Later, they can be transferred to the permanent record book.

Using Sweet Potato Culls For Hog Meal

Farmers in Johnston county are putting their cull and jumbo sweet potatoes to use for the first time, this year, according to a report received at State college this week, from

Eastern and Western champions in the state-wide high school oratorical contest of the North Carolina Good Health association were picked last Friday in semi-final rounds held at Wake Forest and Greensboro.

Winners from the Western half of the state are Theresa Alley, of Waynesville, who represented Haywood county, and Harvey Adams, of Farmer, who represented Randolph county. The elimination was held at Woman's College in Greensboro.

The two Western winners will meet winners from the East in the contest finals later this month at a place and date to be announced.

C. W. Tarlton, assistant county agent for the extension service.

Mr. Tarlton says that a dehydrating plant, set up earlier in the year, has been operating since digging time, transforming the yams into meal.

Persons feeding this sweet potato meal to swine and cattle report good results, and the farm agent says indications point to an increased acreage of this crop in 1947.

Pointing out that sweet potatoes have an equal food value to corn after they have been ground and dried, Mr. Tarlton says that approximately three bushels of potatoes are required to make one bushel of the meal.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all our friends, who in numerous ways expressed kindness and sympathy at the sudden death of our companion and father. Also for the beautiful flowers.
