At three months of age, the baby should be vaccinated—for smallpox.

At six months, the whooping cough and diphtheria immunizations should be begun, with a total of three doses given, at intervals of one month.

At nine months, plain diphtheria toxoid for two or three doses at monthly intervals.

At two or two and a half years, booster doses of diphtheria and whooping cough toxoids.

At the age of five, boosters of the toxoid, with the smallpox vaccination repeated. If smallpox vaccination is repeated every five to seven years, she said, a second "take", or scar, is rare.

Sometime between the third and sixth years, a series of three shots should be given for typhoid, at intervals of a week or 10 days. To continue typhoid immunity, a dose of typhoid vaccine is recommended each year.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Sam Hackney Reports on the U.S.A.

Sam Hackney and the missus just returned from a trailer trip around the country. They're tired, and glad to be home, but mighty impressed with what they saw.

As Sam reports—every section has something different; a different way of talking; different tastes in food and drink; different laws and customs. But bigger than all these differences is the American spirit of tolerance that lets us live together in united peace.

"Of course," says Sam, "you run into intolerance from time to time. Individuals who criticize another's right to speak his mind; enjoy a glass of beer; or work at any trade he chooses. But those are the exceptions—and we're even tolerant of them!"

From where I sit, more of us ought to make a trip like the Hackneys—to realize firsthand how America is bigger than its many differences... how tolerance of those differences is the very thing that makes us strong.
