Our Great America *by MackWilliamsburg Is Visited By 5,000
School Children

WILLIAMSBURG, Va.—Nearly 5,000 Virginia school children visited this "living laboratory" of early American history during the five-month period from November 1 through March 31. It was announced by Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., the organization which is carrying forward the restoration of this colonial capital to its 18th century appearance.

A total of 97 Virginia public schools sent 4,349 students here in special groups during the winter months when the hostesses and escorts who guide visitors through the exhibition buildings were able to give the classes more individual attention.

The organized tours of Virginia school children proved so successful that plans are now under consideration to extend them to include school groups in the neighboring states of North Carolina and Maryland.
