THE "EYES" HAVE IT

The almost human orthorater, an optical-electrical device which measures eye power, has proved to be an important development in an employee health project undertaken by a New England textile mill. Tests have not only helped employees find the right kind of job in the mills, but also assisted them in conserving and improving their vision. Above, Nurse Lucille Lockhart is giving the test to one of the mill workers at the Wauregan, Conn. plant of Wauregan Mills.
