

WANT ADS

JOHNSON JINGLE

(Editor's Note: Because many readers have learned to look forward to the jingles of George M. Johnson in the Want Ad Column of The Press, it seemed only fitting that the following communication from Mr. Johnson, now visiting in Concrete, Wash., should appear in this column.)

I took a rambling notion, One fine November day, To come out West and visit around.

Then probably work for pay. I landed today about 1 o'clock, Being December the fourth day, As hungry as a wolf— And a long ways from Morgan's cafe!

But soon had dinner and found The Press here waiting for me, so I wasn't so lonely as you might imagine. But when I landed and looked around and saw the snow-covered mountains every way I looked, I soon discovered that my clothing didn't suit the climate, or didn't suit my feelings in this climate.

I sure enjoyed the scenery, and stood the trip fine.

Wishing you success and a merry Christmas.

GEO. M. JOHNSON

P. S. I forgot to tell about filling some saws and eating a good turkey dinner on Thanksgiving day down in Richmond, Calif., where we stopped a few days to visit some relatives.

SMART SALESMAN

"All very interesting," said Miss Gregory to the motor car salesman, "and now show me the depreciation, will you? I hear it is heavy on these cars."

"To tell the truth, lady," replied the super salesman, "we found it a constant source of worry, and had it removed altogether."
