State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q. How can kerosene be piped to stoves for brooding poults?

A. Lee W. Herrick, Jr., Extension poultry specialist at State college says you can save many steps by piping the kerosene directly to the pen. The supply tank should be elevated outside the brooder house and a pipe run from it to the brooder. Kerosene may be supplied to the brooder by one of three ways: (1) Fit a faucet to the supply line just above the small supply tank for the brooder, and turn it on to fill the tank. (2) Place an automatic float valve in the small brooder tank to keep the kerosene level constant. (3) Connect the brooder stove directly to the main supply line. Any of these methods may be used for one or many brooder stoves.

Q. How can I destroy broom sedge in my pasture? I have tried burning it off, but it comes right back.

A. Broomsedge is a poor-land pest. It cannot be eliminated by "burning off," but it can be controlled by fertilization. Tests show that it was reduced appreciably by liberal applications of phosphoric acid. The reduction in broom sedge was much greater when phosphoric acid and potash were applied, but the most striking decrease occurred with the application of nitrogen, together with the other mineral elements.

For Representative . . .

I, G. F. Burrell, announcing myself as a candidate to represent Macon County in the General Assembly, subject to the Democratic Primary, wish to say:

If I am elected by the people of Macon County I will do my best to have the old age pension extended to the old age people, pauper or millionaire, to the amount of $50 a month.

Also I will introduce better road system for the county people, school busses, and also better school facilities.

I am further in favor of giving more careful attention to for our Macon GIs, and if I am nominated on next Saturday, 29th, I shall contact our boys at Washington, and see if we cannot have an act passed right now to take our census of the U. S. and put our GIs who have no jobs taking them, for that this work is really a schooling to them while it will save our country a great lot money which must go to our boys any way.

If the people of Macon County see fit to elect me, I will fight to the end for what I advocate.

G. F. Burrell

FRANKLIN MAN GREW UP WITH KERR SCOTT

I have known W. Kerr SCOTT for 45 years.

I had the privilege of growing up in the same neighborhood with SCOTT. I knew SCOTT'S father and mother, I knew his brothers and sisters—14 of them. No boy ever grew to manhood with a finer record than W. Kerr SCOTT.

Citizens interested in a Christian gentleman being elected governor of our great State would do well to study SCOTT'S church record. Ministers all over the State acclaim SCOTT as one of the greatest Christians ever to run for governor.

Citizens interested in good schools should know that Mr. SCOTT'S grandfather was a school teacher, his step-mother was a school teacher, his wife was a school teacher, and two of his sisters are school teachers. His brother, Robert Scott, is now president of the North Carolina Board of Education. Kerr SCOTT has had schools bred into him.

SCOTT has made a success as a farmer, as a business man, and as Commissioner of Agriculture.

I know that SCOTT, who has many talents, would make us a better governor than a one-talent man.
