HOG RAISING PAY PROFITS

Fewer Swine Being Raised, High Prices Believed In Prospect

North Carolina farmers seeking an additional source of income might well consider hog production, believes Moyle S. Williams, farm management specialist at State college, who says the price outlook is very favorable and the prospect for increased feed supplies are very strong.

Mr. Williams said that, according to the bureau of agricultural economics, the 1948 spring pig crop totaled about 51 million head, 3 per cent less than in 1947 and the smallest since 1941. Prospects indicate a smaller 1948 fall pig crop.

The farm management specialist said hog prices have been low as compared with cattle prices. But it appears likely, he continued, that hog prices will advance relative to cattle in the next few months, as cattle slaughter increases and hog slaughter declines seasonally.

Pointing out that corn yields in North Carolina have jumped considerably in the past five years, Mr. Williams said one of the most profitable ways to market that corn is through

State College Hints To Farm Homemakers

Cantaloupes are plentiful this year and along with their appetizing color, flavor and texture, they are a good source of vitamin C. Those of deep yellow color also are a good source of vitamin A. Cantaloupes today are sweeter and ripen faster than they used to be. This is because of the newer trend toward picking riper and pre-cooling before shipping. Many cantaloupes today are harvested at what growers call "full slip"—that is, when the stem breaks easily from the vine indicating ripeness. At this stage the melons ripen easily to their full sweetness.

Iron with the grain of the fabric—it makes ironing easier, though the difference may be almost imperceptible. An even more important reason for ironing with the grain is to prevent wrinkles from sagging out of shape.

hogs, provided the hogs are raised efficiently. Many Tar Heel hog producers, he stated, have failed to realize the profits they should because of the small number of pigs saved per litter. The goal should be an average of at least eight pigs saved per litter.

Mr. Williams said this goal may be achieved through the use of good sows, good care, proper houses, good pasture, and balanced feed. By following such a program and saving a large number of pigs from each litter, North Carolina farmers can reasonably expect a good profit from hog production, he concluded.
