ELLIJAY SCHOOL BUILDING WORK TO START SOON

there is no provision for a school library, but Mr. Houk said that, in elementary schools, each classroom has its own library.

The board approved Mr. Houk's suggestion that he investigate the comparative cost of radiant heating—a system in which heat pipes are placed in cement beneath the floor—with ordinary heating plans.

There was considerable discussion as to whether to attempt to build the school's auditorium at this time. Mr. Houk told the board that about $50,000 is on hand in the capital outlay fund, and the approximately $12,000 or $13,000 1948 capital outlay tax money has not been turned over to the board yet. Even so, he said, the board would lack several thousand dollars of enough to complete the structure. When he suggested that funds could be borrowed from the State Literary fund, it was decided, on motion of Walter Gibson, to go ahead and complete the building, including the auditorium.

Mr. Houk reported to the board that:

A well dug at the Ellijay site is furnishing more than 10 gallons of water per minute.

He is wrecking the two-room Allison Watts school, with a view to using the materials to build a warehouse at the school site, it having been determined the Buck Creek building is not worth moving.

The first load of material for the Cowee school heating plant has arrived.

The four-room addition to the Franklin school cost $17,095.55 to construct. This is at the rate, he said, of $4.34 per square foot of floor space.

All five members of the board attended the meeting.

Situation On Health Work Is Explained

department for the fiscal year 1948-49 and to what extent this amount will affect the work of the board of health in your county.

"The fact that Macon County gave $4000 last year and has pledged the same for this fiscal year to carry out its program will in our judgement affect the work of the board of health in Macon County one of two ways:

"First, no provisions for salary increases can be made on the basis of the proposed appropriation to personnel who serve Macon County. People who continue to work in your county for no additional salary will in all probability receive more lucrative offers from other agencies.

"Second, Macon County cannot expect to obtain maximum performance of services from its workers who are paid less than employees are getting in other county or district health departments for similar services. I was our hope that all county and district health departments would at least make some provisions to take care of necessary salary increases.

"We trust that we have in a small measure given you some helpful information. We note that your district budget is yet to reach our office and no quarterly checks can be mailed until the budget is received. If there is any further help that we can give you please feel free to call on us."

DEMOCRATS WIN AS MACON VOTE FOLLOWS TREND

John Wilkinson by 2,903 to 1,985, in the latter race, and 3,059 to 1,886, in the former.

The 3,059 votes received by Scott was the highest received by any candidate in the race this county.

The county vote for all other state offices, in which every race was won by a Democratic candidate in every instance was roughly 2,900 Democratic votes to 1,965 Republican.

Monroe M. Redden, incumbent twelfth district congressman, defeated his Republican opponent, W. H. Candler. Throughout the district he had a 2 to 1 lead, on the basis of incomplete returns.

On a state-wide basis, Scott piled nearly a three-to-one majority over Pritchard; with a reported 187,062 votes in returns from 791 of the states 1,959 precincts. Broughton was apparently obtaining approximately the same majority over Wilkinson.

In the state senatorial race, L. B. Nichols Andrews Democrat, led Silas Dean, Macon County Republican, both in the county and throughout the district. Nichols had 2,843 to 1,979 for Dean in Macon County, and 6,432 to 4,472 on incomplete returns for the district.

In the race for county surveyor, Ray Norton, Democrat, defeated James Denman by a 2,895 to 2,024 count.

Macon Farmers Inspect Federation Facilities

ing delegation.

At the hatchery, the next four point, the Macon group inspected facilities for hatching 330,000 at a time—more chicks, it was said, than can be disposed of in this territory.

At the Southeastern Artificial Breeding station, which though not a Federation project is operated in a Federation barn, the Macon farmers looked over 25 top ranking dairy-type bulls.

The tobacco re-drying plant, where tobacco is either dried or has moisture added, as required, was a point of keen interest, especially to those who grow tobacco. From the re-drying plant, the group, by special request of some of the visitors, went next to the Carolina Tobacco warehouse.

At both these tobacco points they saw scores of hogsets of tobacco that had been bought by the U. S. Commodity Credit Corporation at the support price—slightly higher than the amount bid by private buyers—and was being stored until disposition is made of it. All the 1946 crop bought by the corporation, it was said, had been sold by the government without loss.

The trip to Asheville was marked by a constant interchange of typical Macon County wit. There was plenty of fun on the return trip, too, but the farmers spent most of the time interestedly discussing what they had seen.

Those making the trip, in addition to Mr. Thomas, were:

BOTH SENATE AND HOUSE LOST BY REPUBLICANS

vention, and even after he won the nomination, their support was less than half-hearted.

The graying, 64-year old Truman, in a 271-speech vote drive that took him into 36 states, conducted, in fact, what amounted to an almost one-man campaign. And he and his campaign manager, Senator Harold Borah of Rhode Island, were the only two public figures in the country who, throughout the campaign, professed confidence in Democratic victory.

Control of the next senate has been in considerable doubt for the past several weeks, but even the most optimistic Democrat could hardly have hoped to win the house. In the house, the Republicans held a 34-member edge on the Democrats, but the Democrats nosed out those 34, plus.

One almost certain result of the Democratic victory appeared to be a Truman administration effort to enact a comprehensive civil rights program. It was his proposal for anti-lynch legislation, a federal anti-poll tax law, and creation of a federal fair employment practices commission that started the Southern rebellion. That proposal, too, may have played a big part in his election.
