asked to investigate the matter, it was decided to install a traffic light at the intersection right-of-way was not enough to of Porter and Wayah streets. committee recommended that the signal be a two-light type with only the red and green signals, and no warning sign. The committee also recommended that the right-of-way which Frank Leach had offered to deed to the town, running just west of the ball ground from the schoolhouse to Wayah street, not be accepted. Mr. Leach had made this offer

Mayor Angel pointed out that this is private property, and that the owners were not willing to allow a right-of-way across their property unless the federal government would give them the right to cross the post office property at the east end of the alley in order to make a through street.

In describing conditions there, a board member pointed out that the Stewart house had previously been condemned and ordered torn down. Then Mr. Whitmire said that "the board would be to blame if that and of town caught fire."

The board also moved to buy from E. J. Carpenter for $1,250 the property where the town's water storage tanks are situated, on Harrison Avenue. This property is in two sections covered by separte leases, both of which have 25 more years to run. The town has been paying $75 per year rental.

Garland Given 25 Years In Highlands Robberice

R. S. Jones referred to Mrs. Garland, and the fact that she had stuck by her husband, Gar-land laid his forehead on the table before him, and those nearest saw clenched fists move toward his eyes. And when Solicitor Thad D. Bryson, Jr., re-ferred to his "good daddy and mother", the youth's body shook silently

When he arose to be sen-tenced, first one hand, then the other, gripped fingers that shook; his face twitched.

There were three sentences, 10 years for possession of bur-glary tools, 10 for the Potts stere robbery, and five for the Highlands Theatre and Doyle's Self-Service grocery robberies.

First, Judge Patton passed the burglary tools sentence.

Then, for the Potts store rob-bery, "to be confined in the State's prison . . ". The voice from the bench hesitated, and Garland shot one frightened, imploring look at his mother, who sat nearby, and who, along with his father, had testified n his behalf.

When the case was called Solicitor Bryson suggested that, due to the seriousness of the offenses, the court should appoint an attorney to represent Garland. Judge Patton appointed Mr. Jones.

In the youth's behalf, the defense attorney, through cross-examination of two state's witnesses, Pritchard Smith, Jr., and Sgt. T. A. Sandlin, of the highway patrol, and through Garland's own testimony, brought out these circumstances:

Garland is 22. He is one of 11 children of a Kentucky coal miner. He is married, and his vife is expecting a baby soon. He served in the navy during World War 2, and was working when he first joined Philpotts. Prior to that time, he had never been convicted of any offence except drunkenness. He
