Old Mill Will Be Razed, No Letup On Cleanup, Mayor Says

A "clean face" for Franklin moved closer to being this week with the announcement by Mayor Robert M. Dillard that the old home of the Franklin Feed Mill would be razed soon.
The old mill, located at the foot of Town hill, will be razed by Roy Carpenter, the mayor said.
In making the announcement, Mr. Dillard said future plans for an over-all cleanup of the town includes clearing a number of lots, leveling of the Baptist lot on West Main street, and washing town streets.
Projects recently completed under the cleanup program: (1) Clearing the lot at the intersection of N. C. 28 and Main street; (2) mowing the Indian mound; (3) Cutting weeds along sidewalks of Main street; (4) hauling away rubbish where the Dills' Recapping establishment burned last winter; (5) Scraping oil deposits from parking spaces in downtown Franklin.
"We don't intend to let up with our cleanup campaign," Mr. Dillard said, "until the town outshines all others."
