Seek Greater Local Share In Education

Greater representation by local teachers and principals in state-wide educational groups was the chief topic of discussion at the last meeting of the advisory council of the Macon County unit of the N. C. Education association.

Miss Roberta Enloe, president, was empowered by the council to appoint a committee to handle the organization of a separate teachers' department in the county. County Supt. Holland McSwain agreed to supervise the organization of a principal's department.

Miss Enloe explained that the organization of separate departmental units for principals and classroom teachers is in keeping with the state set-up.

She added it is hoped the move to set up departments in the county will give further impetus to professional growth here.

Miss Edna Jamison was elected chairman of teacher welfare; E. G. Crawford, chairman of the committee for revising the constitution; and Tillery T. Love, chairman of the international relations committee.

Mrs. Gay Teague, vice-president of the association, reported on the highlights of the association leaders' conference at Catawba college in Augusta.

The first Saturday night in November was picked by the advisory group for a social meeting for the entire membership of the local organization.

Miss Maxie Wright, chairman of the hospitality committee, will plan the program.
