Because can openers are used daily or oftener in most kitchens, household equipment specialists suggest that before buying a can opener, you should make sure it will pierce the metal easily and cut the lid without leaving sharp or rough edges that are a hazard to hands, or whittling off bits of metal that will fall in the food. Very convenient is a can opener that lifts and holds the lid so that it doesn't fall back into the can. A wall-bracket opener has the advantage of being steady and in position for immediate use. But there are hand-openers that will cut cans smoothly and easily.

A punch opener is most convenient for milk and fruit juice cans. Best buy is one that makes a hole large enough for easy pouring and turns the edges of the hole inside the can for safety.

Toys for infants and toddlers should be sturdily constructed.

and sufficiently large so that the youngster cannot swallow them yet not so heavy and cumbersome that they would injure the youngster if they toppled. The wheels and strings of wooden toys should be securely fastened in place—NOT with carpet tacks or thumb tacks. All wood surfaces should be smooth and free from splinters and rough spots. No sharp edges should be exposed; all edges should be rolled or turned in, and corners of points should be rounded. Look for these safety points when you buy toys for children:

1. Are there any removable parts small enough to swallow?
2. Are there any sharp edges or angles?
3. Is the movable toy too heavy for the young owner to carry easily?
4. Is there any danger from fire or poisonous dyes?
5. Will it break or chip easily?
6. Is it too simple or too complicated for the child's physical or mental development?

Q. When should broccoli be planted?

A. Dr. Fred D. Cochran, professor of horticulture at State college, says broccoli is a cool-season crop and must be produced in the spring or the fall. However, it is somewhat like cauliflower in cold hardiness and will be damaged by heavy freezes.

In Eastern North Carolina, broccoli should be grown between late February and early June, or between July and December in the fall. In mountain areas the spring crop should be put in the field in late March and harvested in June and early July. The fall crop should be planted in late June and harvested in October and early November.

Early-maturing varieties should be used. The two most satisfactory are Early Green Sprouting and De Cicco. Tests by the North Carolina Experiment station show a definite need for adding boron to
