New Business And Ownership

Changes Noted In Franklin

New businesses and changes in ownership have been notable in Franklin since the first of the year.

Two tractor and farm machinery concerns have opened for business—Macon Tractor and Implement Company, operated by Max Parrish and dealing in Ferguson tractors and farm machinery, is located temporarily at the City Tire Shop next to Macon Motor Company on West Palmer Street; Enloe Farm Tractor and Equipment Company, Harold Enloe, manager, is occupying the building at the foot of Town Hill formerly occupied by the Waynesville Tractor Company branch office. The new company handles Massey-Harris tractors, and farm machinery.

Terrell's Dry Cleaners opened for business in its new building on Iotia Street next to the fire department and Dryman's, specializing in men's and boys' clothing, is opening on Main Street at an early date.

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Pattillo have taken a lease on the Franklin Lodge and Golf Course; Roy Mashburn and his son, Billy Mashburn, bought Henson's Feed and Grocery Store on Main Street; and Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Saunders this week purchased The Coffee Shack on Main Street from Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Walker.

highlights of the church's history. He pointed out that the present structure is the fourth, two of the three previous ones having been destroyed by fire.

The pastor, the Rev. C. E. Murray, read extracts from church records that go back to the founding of the church.

Other features of the program were group singing and the showing, by Weaver Shope, program chairman, of colored slides on monastery life.

The club voted to meet next month with the Presbyterian men's group.

President Erwin Patton presided, and the dinner was served by members of the Wesleyan Service Guild.

Burley Meeting Draws 60 Men

Plant bed management received special emphasis at a burley tobacco growers' meeting Friday afternoon at the agricultural building.

Approximately 60 local growers attended the session, which was conducted by Ray Bennett and Harold Nau, tobacco specialists with the N. C. Extension Service in Raleigh.

The specialists recommended chemical weed control and early treatment for wild fire and blue mold. Both treatments should be used as preventives rather than cures, they stressed.

Local burley growers were urged to prime bottom leaves and cure them when they ripen, rather than let the leaves drop off and rot.

Proper soil type, fertilization, disease and insect control, curing, grading, and marketing also were covered at the session.

the fourth Monday in the month—February 23.

WOMAN'S CLUB PICKS LEADERS

Mrs. Rickman Named To Presidency; Home Agent Speaks

Mrs. Doris D. Rickman Monday night was elected president of the Franklin Junior Woman's Club.

Others named to serve with her are Mrs. Frankie Jacobs, first vice-president; Mrs. June Huscusson, second vice-president; Miss Tava McCoy, third vice-president; Mrs. Jo Ann Bryant, secretary; Mrs. Betty Jean Angel, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Louise Ledford, treasurer.

The new officers will be installed at a special banquet in May.

In addition to the election of officers, Monday's meeting featured a talk on the American home by Mrs. Florence S. Sherrill, county home demonstration agent, and the appointment of a committee to act as a go-between the club and the general assembly.

The special committee, composed of Mrs. Ledford, Mrs. J. P. Brady, and Mrs. C. Banks Finger, was instructed to contact Rep. Walter Dean and Sen. J. H. Crawford about an appropriation for playground equipment at the Caswell Training School in Kinston, a state institution for exceptional children, and to urge the two legislators to vote in favor of a driver training program and a bill recently introduced making a jail sentence mandatory for second offenders of drunk driving.

February 12 was set as the date for the club's "Sweetheart Banquet". It will be held at Slagle Memorial Building.

Grass Roots Effective For Holding Moisture On Land

Farmers of Macon County who are looking for more effective ways of saving and holding moisture on their land are reminded by J. H. Enloe, Jr., chairman of the county Production Marketing Administration committee, that grass roots are hard to beat as a reservoir for rainfall.

The chairman pointed out that a check made recently on rangeland in Texas showed that where there was a good sod cover the soil absorbed 97 per cent of the water applied. On the same type of soil where the range was in poor condition and most of the grass was gone, 90 per cent of the water was lost in runoff, he said.

In another check following a rainstorm, the soil on barren land was wet to a depth of six to eight inches. On land with a good cover the water soaked down to a depth of 24 inches.

Mr. Enloe said that most farmers are aware that a good grass cover is a means of checking runoff and erosion, but that probably few realize how much difference it makes in the amount of water actually held in the soil. The grass roots open up channels which lead the water into the soil. Where vegetation is sparse, falling rain drops soon puddle the surface soil and seal it over so little moisture soaks in.

As the amount of water that accumulates on the surface increases, little streams are started and gullies begin. Instead of going into the soil it runs off and carries valuable topsoil with it.

The moisture held in the soil not only provides needed water for growing plants, but much of it percolates down through the soil to build up the reservoirs which supply springs and streams.

For this reason, Mr. Enloe said, farmers and ranchers who are using the Agricultural Conservation program to help improve pastures and ranges are not only building up a reservoir to hold back moisture for their own use, but they are contributing to the water supply along the streams and rivers below.
