

Elementary School News

By MRS. BETH GUFFEY (Supervisor)
Through the cooperation of parents and teachers and the hospitality of friends, many Macon County school children were among millions viewing the first coast-to-coast telecast of an inauguration, that of

Gen. Eisenhower Tuesday of last week. They watched the ceremonies as a lesson in living history. Seeing television itself was a new experience to many of the children.
We are indebted to Bruce Bryant, of Macon County Supply, and Cullen Bryant, of Bryant Furniture Store, for loaning and installing a television set in the auditorium of East

Franklin School, affording an opportunity for all the pupils at the school to see the ceremonies. Our thanks also to Mrs. Myrtle Dryman, who contacted the two stores.
Practically everyone who has television in their homes invited as many children as possible to see the inauguration.

Cooperation Of All Needed For Conservation In Macon

The urgency of protecting and improving soil and water resources in Macon County calls for the cooperation of all who are interested in keeping farms productive and in making them more productive, according to J. H. Enloe, Jr., chairman of the county Production and Marketing Administration committee.
Mr. Enloe said this means more than just the farmers of the county working together. The support and cooperation of all people in the county are needed. Our farms not only provide much of our food and fiber, but they are responsible for a good share of the business that keeps our towns and cities going, he said.
Because the conservation of soil and water resources is so important to all, the chairman continued, congress has provided the Agricultural Conservation Program as a means whereby all share in protecting, conserving, and improving the land. Through this program, farmers are aided in carrying out essential conservation practices which otherwise would be left undone. The program also provides a means of utilizing the

Children At Union See Inauguration

By MRS. J. C. HORSLEY
The children of the Union School from the fourth grade up were fortunate last Tuesday in getting to enjoy the inaugural ceremonies by television.
The homes of the following were thrown open for the different grades: Mrs. Ned Teague, Mrs. Wilbur Teague, Mrs. Elmon Teague, and Mrs. Roy Sanders. "Inauguration" no longer is just a great big word to these children.
