Elementary School News

The health education program, more than any other phase of education, is concerned with each child's development, maintenance of a sound, healthy body, and with building desirable attitudes and practices for healthy living.

The older boys and girls need to know that mental and social health are important parts of the safety picture and that safety goes beyond just looking out for one's self to an assumption of responsibility for the safety of others.

The eighth grade pupils of Iotla School have just completed an interesting study in health. The class chose three topics for special study—Safety, First Aid, and Harmful Effects of Alcohol and Narcotics. They divided into three groups, each pupils choosing the topic of which he wished to make a study.

Harry Moses, teacher, keeping in the background as much as possible, cited the children to sources of material where information could be secured. He worked directly with the First Aid group, teaching them how to control bleeding, the application of splints, how to administer artificial respiration, and transportation practices, like loading and carrying a stretcher or truck.

When the studies were completed each group presented its findings to the entire class, including demonstrations in First Aid. Attractive booklets, charts, and posters were made and displayed in the classroom.

A great deal of information was gained by the pupils, which will not only help them to establish fundamental concepts of health and safety, but will also provide an opportunity for developing leadership and co-operation for teaching skills in reading, writing, speaking, and art.

In the Otto School, Mrs. Maybur H. Norton's third grade pupils set up 10 rules of good health and made attractive posters illustrating each rule.

This group of third grade pupils are having fun making and observing a surprise garden in their science corner. The following is their own story of this project:

"We filled our sand box with rich soil. We brought seeds to school. Some were flower seeds and some were vegetable seeds. Each of us planted a seed but we didn't tell anyone what we planted. We gave each seed planted a number. Some seeds came up in five days. Others haven't come up yet. We are listing the plants on a chart as they come up."

Here is news from Highlands School, as reported by Miss Virginia Edwards' pupils:

"We received some new school supplies last week. We are having fun with finger paints and modeling clay. We also received a shipment of new library books, of which we are very proud."

"Thanks to our PTA for the temporary coat racks. They have been placed in a few rooms. The rest of us hope to have them soon."

"Our janitor has just completed installing towel and soap dispensers in all classrooms and rest rooms. We are glad that most of our teachers and pupils are in school again following an epidemic of influenza."
