Agents Schedule Meetings To Explain New Program

Extension service agents are spending the first half of this month explaining the new Farm and Home Development Program to rural Macon County through a series of night meetings.

Plans for the promotion of the program in the individual communities also are being discussed by the agents and community leaders. The new program — started here last month — is designed to put extension services on a more personal basis with farm families through three new extension workers, who are working with individual families.

Agents meeting with the communities include Mrs. Florence S. Sherrill, home agent, County Agent T. H. Fagg, and the three new associate agents hired for the program, Mrs. Margaret D. Smith, John J. Wrinn, and Robert McNeil.

One meeting already has been held. This one was Monday at Nantahala.

All are set for 7:30 o'clock, according to the agents.

The schedule:
Today (Thursday): Cowee at Cowee School.

December 3: Hickory Knoll at the Methodist church, and Upper Cartoogechaye at the Malden's Chapel Methodist Church.

December 6: Iotia at the Iotia School.

December 7: Cullasaja at Cullasaja School, and Clark's Chapel at the Wells Grove church.

December 9: Burningtown at Forrest Huggins' home, and Higdonville at Cullasaja School.

December 14: Mulberry at Calvary church.

December 16: Cartoogechaye at Cartoogechaye School.
