News Making

Continued From Editorial Page would lean over just a little further for the young man to help him start a new business or build a home, many that have gone would still be here. If we would all make it a point to give at least a portion of our business to the young man starting out, more of them would have been able to stay here. And if we really believe in our youth like we say we do, aren't they worth taking a chance on or extending some extra effort for?

Since the war, two close personal friends of mine and their families have moved away. Both were native born. Both wanted to make this their home. Both could and would have stayed if they could. If our community were really making a conscious effort to look after and keep its young people, they would still be here. They would have meant a lot to our development and growth. It is our fault that they are gone.

Time Of Total Peril

Continued From Editorial Page ning against us, refuse genuine disarmament, and press toward a world victory for Communism. If, however, we have come to our senses and have begun through constructive deeds to regain the friendship of mankind, Russia may see that the hope of world conquest is gone and come to terms.

We must remember that Russia today, in the wake of wide devastation from World War II, is staggering under a gigantic program of military preparation. For them world disarmament would mean a new flow of consumer goods for a severely deprived and dissatisfied people.

Further, if Russia refused to accept really reasonable proposals for world disarmament under the U. N., they would then face a continued arms race and the grim prospect of atomic disaster. They would likewise stand clearly revealed as opposing the very world peace and prosperity which they claimed to champion.

In any case, we will never know whether world disarmament is possible until we become convinced ourselves and work for it in earnest.

RAISE A STANDARD
What is the way to meet and to avoid the impending time of total atomic peril, and to build instead the foundations for lasting peace?

We must combine into a great positive policy the two essential ingredients of creative new attitudes and actions regarding the world-wide revolt against colonialism, landlordism, racism; plus, a determined effort to achieve genuine world-wide disarmament under the protection of a revised and strengthened United Nations.

It is the considered conviction of many thoughtful people that along this dual road, together with other needed steps, lies our only hope of world survival and progress.

Total peril and shameful end, or final chance and hope once more? The choice is ours, and may we — with God's help — choose the right.

In the words of Washington: "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest may repair. The event (the outcome) is in the hand of God."
