This Week With Macon County Agents

By MRS. MARGARET D. SMITH
(Associate Agent)

Was last year a year of plenty or a lean year for you?

Since Bible days we have had years of plenty and years of want—through the years to come we will continue to have such cycles. Therefore, it is important that we prepare in the days of plenty for the days of want. The way the family income is used and the amount that is saved will determine the financial security of the family.

To spend every dollar or to let saving become hoarding is equally poor management. A well-balanced standard of living calls for wise spending and saving. Regardless of how small or how large our incomes are, we should know what to buy and how to buy it.

We spend for present needs such as food, clothing, housing, education and transportation.

We should save for future needs, the children's education, protection for rainy days, security in old age, medical care and for insurance.

We pay off past debts—often made because we have not had a balanced plan for our spending and saving.

The families who plan ahead know what they have to spend. They also know what they want to do with it. It is a grand idea for the family to sit down together and list everything that is needed. It is not possible for a family to have everything they want. First things must come first, therefore, a priority number should be given to each item. In this way, goals can be set up.

All families have their "ups" and "downs". Good money management can do much to ease the "downs".

If a family will keep records along with their home plans they will have a basis for all planning and spending. In Macon County we have over 44 home demonstration club members who keep records of their spending and six non-home demonstration members who are keeping home account books. These account books help the family to evaluate their spending plan and as one of the women said, "It helps to settle more family arguments than anything we have ever done." Perhaps some item such as transportation has cost too much and records will give some basis for changing this spending plan. This home record will prove a valuable assistance in filing your income tax return.

Requests are already coming in for 1955 home record books. If you are interested in keeping one call by the home agent's office or write for one and assistance will be given.

Burningtown Picks Welch As President

By JOYCE HUGGINS
(Community Reporter)

The Burningtown Rural Community Development Organization elected officers at a meeting last Thursday night at the home of Forrest Huggins.

Claude Welch was elected president; Carol Sue Welch, junior vice-president; D. L. Huggins, vice-president; Mrs. Bronce Roper, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Robert Parrish, reporter.

The second Wednesday night of each month was set for meetings. The January meeting will be at the home of Claude Welch on the 12th.

Mrs. Margaret D. Smith and John Wrinn, associate agents, explained how the new Farm and Home Development Program will operate in Macon County.

North Carolina ranks fourth in the United States in the amount of inland water areas.
