CARSON PLANS PARTY-MEAL FOR OLDESTERS

Event Honoring Cunninghams And Wallace March 5.

By MRS. LEONA W. MOORE
(Community Reporter)

Plans were made at the February meeting of the Carson Rural Community Development Organization to honor the community's three oldest members' anniversary and birthday with a box supper and party at the community building on March 5.

The three honorees will be George Wallace, who will celebrate his 89th birthday, and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cunningham, who will mark their 60th wedding anniversary. Several members of the Cunninghams' wedding party plan to be present and the wedding will be reenacted as part of the evening's entertainment. The public is invited to attend the party, which will be held at 6 p.m.

At the last meeting, the library chairman reported 10 books had been given to the library by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gustaw, of New York.

Much 4-H interest in the community was reported by the 4-H leaders and it was planned for them to go ahead with playground facilities near the picnic area.

An old-fashioned spelling bee will be held as a feature of the next regular meeting.

A film, "Good Manners in the Forests" was shown by County Ranger J. Fred Bryson.

The quilt made and given by the women of the home demonstration club went to Mrs. Mary Ellen Blaine. Proceeds will be applied to painting the floor of the building. This job will be done as soon as weather permits.

E. R. McDowell's name was drawn for the attendance prize, but he was not present, so the $2 remains in the treasury.

This Week With Macon County Agents

By JAMES G. FLANAGAN
(Assistant Agent)

At this time of the year all lovers of the soil are beginning to hitch up their plows and get at it again. In doing the spring plowing the most important piece of ground plowed will be your garden.

A vegetable garden will on an area-for-area basis give higher returns than practically any other crop grown. Fresh vegetables from your own garden taste better and are better for you than those from the markets. Regardless of income, people eat more vegetables when home grown than when bought. Then too, gardens provide valuable training for your children, not to mention giving the man around the house something to do.

When selecting the location of the garden, select an area with good soil. If space is available, plan to rotate garden because of disease build-up, especially nematodes. Keep garden near house. If possible, locate garden where it can be irrigated. During the dry season, being able to apply one inch of water every week, will mean the difference between failure and success. (To give one acre of land one inch requires 28,230 gallons of water). Gardens should be planted away from trees and large shrubs. Full sun is best.

In selection of seed and plants, buy only certified seed, if possible. Germination is poor with many vegetables from left-over seed. Try not to carry any over for the next year. If you save seed, be sure the seed are from disease-free plants. Bean seed grown in the arid regions of western United States and cabbage seed from the Puget Sound area of Washington are the most disease free.

One should try to keep their garden small and highly fertile. Fertility may be obtained with manure, rotted sawdust, or leaves. If available, broadcast, and plow into soil about 15 bushels of stable manure or one-third as much poultry manure to each 1,000 square feet; plus 25 pounds of super-phosphate. If manure isn't available, use a 6-8-6 or 8-8-8, commercial fertilizer at the recommended rates. The best time to test your soil is during the winter months and lime accordingly. A pH of 5.8 to 6.2 is best for vegetables. In applying fertilizer be sure that the seeds are not in direct contact with the fertilizer. Either mix soil and fertilizer, or apply fertilizer in two rows about 6 inches apart and 3 1/2 inch deep and plant the seed between the two rows containing the fertilizer.

The above suggestions are only a few of many others. If you need additional information contact your county agent's office and receive a copy of the "Farm
