

Lions Complete Another Step In Mail Delivery

Members of the Franklin Lions Club this week completed the second step in their project to obtain house mail delivery for the town.

This was measuring 25-foot lots on all streets within the corporate limits and assigning numbers to each.

Next step will be a sale of numbers to residences and business houses. The fourth, and final, step for the club will be making application for house delivery with the U. S. Post Office Department.

Plans for the sale of numbers will be announced as soon as the lots and numbers are transferred to a master map, according to J. C. Crisp, chairman of the club's civic improvement committee, which had charge of the latest step.

Proceeds of the sale are already earmarked for the club's work with the blind.

Serving on Mr. Crisp's committee are B. L. McGlamery, Claude Bolton, B. B. Scott, John Davis, and John L. Crawford.

Several years ago, the Lions started their over-all mail delivery project with the purchase and installation of metal street signs.

to be placed on the 27th and the fair probably will open the following afternoon.

In selecting the gymnasium for exhibits and displays, it was pointed out that the playing floor would not be used. The balcony areas and dressing rooms will afford ample room, it was said.

When the outgoing treasurer, W. W. Sloan, reported $1,357.20 on hand from last year's event, a motion was passed to make premium awards. The publishing of a fair catalogue again will be the main source of revenue.

Committee appointments are to be made by the new officers at an early date.

Wayne Proffitt, president of the local agricultural council, presided at the meeting.

terposition resolutions cannot as yet be assessed. But, in an election year, it is likely to be considerable.

Virginia Pattern
Both the almost unanimous approval and the moderate phrasing of the Virginia interposition resolution voted this month insure that it will be a model for those Southern States that have not yet acted. Of the total of 17 States where compulsory segregation was in effect when the Supreme Court ruled against it, six have been moving cautiously toward integration, three have taken no action one way or the other and seven (besides Virginia) are following, or propose to follow, the Old Dominion's lead. There is no question that the movement will retard intergration throughout the entire South. Indeed, that is its clear objective.

However one reacts to the prospect, the Virginia resolution is important for all who take constitutional government seriously. It expresses the certainly reasonable doubt that the 14th amendment ever contemplated compulsory integration. It points out that "the very Congress which proposed the 14th amendment for ratification established separate schools in the District of Columbia."

It further notes that for nearly 90 years the Supreme Court consistently upheld the constitutionality of "separate but substantially equal" schools and thereby implies that the single contrary opinion, of May 17, 1954, may well have been mistaken. Then it concludes that the only proper way to resolve the issue is to put it to the test of constitutional amendment. The fact that such an amendment can be blocked by the negative action of 13 States — one more than a quarter of this total — is not emphasized.

De Tocqueville, were he alive today, would certainly be fascinated by this deloping issue of interposition. Its reincarnation, for the first time since the Civil War, will test the validity of his prediction.
