A recent study shows that 56 per cent of the Tar Heel farm families have a net income of less than $1,500 per year.

Egyptians To Have Surnames At Last; Telephone Responsible

It is taken for granted in the United States and other Western countries that everybody has a surname. But that isn't true everywhere.

In Egypt, for instance, people are going to have family names for the first time in history. And it all came about because of the telephone.

Premier Gamal Abdul Nasser's government has ordered Egyptians to adopt family names, reports The Christian Science Monitor. The reason? Egyptian names follow so little logic that they result in the world's most useless telephone directories.

For example, explains The Monitor:

Moustafa, son of Mahmoud Amine Youssef, is known as Moustafa Amine. Egyptians say this is logical, but can't explain why.

Zaghloul Ali and Mohamed Wagdi are brothers. But at any given moment, Zaghloul Ali may turn out to be Ali Abdel Sayed. To Egyptians, the two names obviously refer to the same man. He just happens to use a different set of his many names if he feels like it.

This system worked well for Egyptians for centuries, but the coming of the telephone has caused complications.

Suppose you want to ring up your friend Mohamed Ahmed. You look for the listing "Ahmed, Mohamed." Under the "A's" you will find 163 Ahmed Mohameds, but no Ahmed, Mohamed. You then realize that to find Mohamed Ahmed you have to look under "Mohamed," not "Ahmed."

Back in the "M's," you wade through no fewer than 40 pages of Mohamed (including two pages of Mohamed Mohameds). You find 159 Mohamed Ahmeds sprawling over two full pages. You then realize that Mohamed Ahmed is only a small piece of your friend's name. Running down the list, you have to choose from "Mohamed Ahmed Abdel Nabi el Eskandar any," Mohamed Ahmed Aly Abou Chanab," or "Mohamed Ahmed Farag el Sanhuri," and so on. You decide to write him a letter instead.

How Simple — To Travel to Heaven

HOW simple it is to travel to any town across the land! Simply make sure that you are on the right train and that you stay on it. Obey the simple rules of the road. That's all. You're sure to get there.

How simple it is to travel to our Heavenly Father's land. Just make sure that you are on the right road and that you stay on it. Obey the simple rules. That's all. You're sure to get there.

Engineers and train crews must know the intricacies of rail-roading. Passengers can learn them for their own benefit but as trains are for everybody, he who knows but little will get there just as surely and as comfortably if he stays on the train and adheres to its rules.

Theologians and teachers must know the fine points of the God-Built road to Heaven. Laymen are encouraged to study these also. But as God's train must be for every man, so he who knows but little must get there just as surely and comfortably if he stays on the train and obeys the rules.

With simplicity of reasoning the Catholic is convinced that God founded one true church, which because it is God's "train", must be perfect in itself and in its operation. To insure this the Catholic believes that God made His engineer, the Pope, infallible in the running of the locomotive — that he divinely empowered the Priests, His train crew, to direct, serve and feed the passengers — and that therefore, for the masses of Catholics, simple Faith and simple obedience form the full paid ticket from here to eternity.

Just as a machine with many complex parts may be simple in operation, so the complexities of the will of an infinite God become simple for the man of Faith who harks to the words of Our Lord Jesus, "He that doeth the will of My Father who is in Heaven, He shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." (Matt. 7:21).

Swafford's Sayin's

Did you ever try walking through the woods at night and suddenly burst a spider's web with your face? Or try pulling two feet of a saw-brier between your toes when you were bare-foot? Did you ever get up at night and hang your little toe on a table leg, or step on a rug that shot one foot south and the other north? Did you ever fill your mouth with food ten times too hot when the only thing you had to cool it was a cup of boiling hot coffee? Did you ever stoop over and as you raised your head decided suddenly to kiss the corner of a shelf? Did you ever have your best friend make vows that were broken — that broke your heart? Did you ever — ? Of course you have. If you have never had any of these or similar experiences you don't know how to sympathize with your country grocerman. If I run out of eggs and bread — every one wants eggs and bread. When I fail to get a delivery on a certain flour — all who want flour want that kind and no other. If I close out a slow moving item — I have more calls than ever for it. Many times I accommodate and trust those who trade with me, then see them suddenly quit with several dollars worth of my hard earned groceries — And not even thank me for them. Oh yes, your country grocerman gets many knocks — is kicked about and criticized, but he (the Lord only knows how) keeps trying to please the hundreds who stop by. And many (more than ever) who appreciate the country grocery store, have proven to me that I have the best friends and neighbors in the world.
