This Week With Macon County Agents

By MRS. MABEL R. SWAN (Assistant Agent)

"It's like pouring water on a duck's back to tell some folks to scald (blanch) vegetables before freezing. But you and I know that lack of proper scalding causes vegetables to toughen, lose flavor, change color, and drop in food value." Thus writes Nita Orr, extension economist in food conservation and marketing.

"Improperly scalded (blanched) vegetables and those not chilled thoroughly and quickly are not good either. Remember, too, that speed between leaving the garden and getting into the freezer makes for good frozen vegetables."

Remember to select choice vegetables for freezing. Not too young nor too old but just right for eating fresh.

Prepare according to freezing booklet and package immediately. Poor packaging can cause loss in food and value and flavor. Always use moisture-vapor proof materials, strong enough to prevent tearing during storage. You want a good closure on every container and every package in your home freezer or locker.

What you use for closing a container is not as important as getting a good closure. Tape, paper-covered wire (twist 'em), metal clamp, rubber band — any of these make a tight closure on a gooseneck twist on a plastic bag. Treated parchment and cellophane bags are best heat-sealed. Remember the protection of the food is your main objective. It can be done in a different way, but they all add up to well-closed container of highly moisture-vapor resistant material. Unless you know what you need, try to buy your containers from folks who do.

Demonstration Club Meetings For Week Are Announced

Today (Thursday): Clark's Chapel club at 10 a. m. with Mrs. Charlie Sutton.

as plants rooted in the fall. For that reason, you should make an extra effort to save the early runner plants and keep them growing.

During late August in the mountains and during early September in the eastern part of the state is the proper time to apply fertilizer to strawberries. If you have a narrow row the fertilizer can be applied in a shallow furrow on each side of the row. If you have a wide matted row it will be necessary to apply some of the fertilizer on top of the plants in the center of the row when the leaves are dry and then brush the fertilizer off the plants. The recommended fertilizer application is 700 lbs. of an 8-8-8 mixture per acre, which is equivalent to about 3 quarts per 100 ft. of row.

Setting of plants in September or October is the home gardeners answer to the problem of fighting grass and weeds all summer. Fall set plants will bear a fair crop in the spring. However, they do not produce any runner plants this fall and therefore a much larger number of plants will have to be set in order to make up for the absence of runner plants. Plants are difficult to obtain in early fall unless you have your own supply.

Nearly 190,000 dairy farmers operate under federal milk marketing orders in supply areas of 65 U. S. cities, reports USDA.

Garden Time...

By ROBERT SCHMIDT

This is the critical period for the strawberry bed. Either the crabgrass is choking the plants out or dry weather is killing them. For that reason, many of our home gardeners are resorting to fall plantings. However, the market gardener is concerned with low costs and high production and therefore must continue to practice spring planting and the development of a matted row bed. You probably have observed that as soon as the spring crop was harvested the old plants began to send out many runners which produced runner plants that caught root in the soil along the row. In the heat of late summer not many runners are produced, but in September and October the runner formation is heavy again. However, our scientists have found that runner plants rooted in early summer will produce about twice as many berries

Have You Ever Seen A "Prayer Book"?

If not, you've missed one of the most important publications in the English language. The Book of Common Prayer of the Anglican Communion (of which the Episcopal Church in the United States is a part) is, second only to the Holy Bible, probably the most widely printed and used book in the English language. Records fail to show how many millions of copies of this unusual book have been printed and circulated since it was first issued by the Church of England in the sixteenth century. Sufficient to say that it has had a profound influence on the development of the English language as we use it today. The Prayer Book, in English and translated into many other tongues, is today the guide to worship for more than 40,000,000 Anglicans the world over.

It is called the Book of Common Prayer because we use it in "common", so that we may join together as participants in corporate worship — not as individuals, but as joint members in "the Body of Christ" — the Church. The Book of Common Prayer is a thrilling document with a thrilling history. Learn more about it. Learn the great satisfaction of corporate worship by joining us in the worship of God in the Episcopal Church near you — soon!

You can learn more about the Book of Common Prayer by reading the interesting booklet "How We Got the Prayer Book". Send the coupon. It's free. No obligation.
