Garden Time . . .

By ROBERT SCHMIDT

In the flower garden this is a good time to plant seed of spring and early summer blooming perennials.

If these seeds are planted now in flats, coldframes, or well-prepared seed beds, and transplanted as soon as large enough to handle, they will bloom next year. If you plant the seeds in the spring most of these plants will not bloom until the following year.

August and September are good months to plant seed of pansies and winter annuals such as annual larkspur, annual phlox, shirley poppies, and cornflower. Pansies should be transplanted but the others may be left as seeded. They are all hardy to winter temperatures. All are early spring bloomers.

We have received requests of information about peonies — will they grow here? Should they be divided? When should they be moved? When and how should new plantings be made?

Peonies are more easily grown in the piedmont and mountain sections of North Carolina, but they can also be grown in coastal plain areas with better care.

The time for making new plantings or for moving or dividing old plants would be October and November in eastern North Carolina and September and October for the Western and mountain sections of the state. Don't move them unless there is good reason to do so. Peonies do not like to be disturbed. If you have a clump doing well and producing good blooms, let it alone. Loss of roots in digging will be harmful.

It is not necessary to divide and move peonies every two or three years as we do iris and daffodils. If a plant is not blooming satisfactorily then it may be advisable to move it to a better location, or perhaps it has been planted too deep and should be taken up and replanted. In such cases, out off as few roots as possible. Peonies should be planted shallow. Buds should not be more than one or two inches below the surface of the soil.

Current magazines and newspapers are advertising the "miracle plant" which is guaranteed to bloom without soil or water. It will do that. The plant is the colchicum, which resembles a large lavender crocus and will send out blooms with leaves during August or September whether in soil, water, or on the kitchen shelf. They may be planted in the yard about two inches deep.
