ley, we lost an outstanding citizen. He was outstanding because the way he made his way would serve as an ideal pattern for any young man to follow. Honesty was his trademark.

He was, of course, honest in his business dealings with his fellow man, but he went further and carried this honesty in to all phases of his life.

In discussion of current problems there was no sham or hypocrisy—no attempt to be on the popular side of a question.

Because he loved people, he was extremely generous, but only if it could be done with no ostentatious show.

His honesty demanded that his work must be done and done right regardless of the energy or time spent. The job, and not a government regulated eight-hour day, determined his working day. If a few hours extra work this evening would enable him to get on to another job tomorrow he worked on, not to make a record, but because it felt it was the thing to do.

Only in evaluating himself did his honesty fail. He always undersold himself. This came from true humility.

Aren't humility and honesty two of the greatest traits of character?

Mrs. Gribble Is Elected President By Union P.-T. A.

Mrs. Hardin Gribble, who has served as secretary of the Union P.-T. A. for the past year, was elected and installed as president at the group's meeting Thursday of last week.

Other officers chosen were J. Ned Teague, vice-president; Mrs. Gordon Ledford, secretary; and Mrs. Lawson Shook, treasurer. Out-going president was Carey

Mrs. Weimar Jones, a past district director of the P.-T. A., installed the officers.

The group was presided by several of the school's primary grades. Mrs. Bradley's first grade gave a rhythm band performance. A TV quiz program was presented by the second grade. Mrs. Kath-

Visitors From Spain And South Africa At Coweeta

Visitors from two nations were at Coweeta Hydrologic Laboratory last week.

Isaac Astorga Alvarez and Jorge Arguelles Alvarez, both foresters from Spain, and Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Menne, of Praetoria, Union of South Africa, were at the laboratory. Mr. Menne is chief of hydrologic research for his country's department of water affairs.

Also on Coweeta's guest list was Carl Wenger, of the U. S. Forest Service management research office in Asheville.

erine Jones, teacher. The third grade, taught by Miss Alice Slagle, recited poems and sang, and Mrs. Teague's fourth grade did chore reading and gave a playlet.

Heard And Seen

ON MACON BYWAYS

By ROLFE NEILL

Overheard in the De Soto Trail Restaurant: "Women want to be dominated. I don't care how much she may say otherwise, a woman likes it best when the man's the boss."

HOW OFTEN have you said to yourself, as you looked over contest rules or some sign which said, "Nothing to buy, just enter your name"? ... well, how often have you remarked, "I've never won anything in my life; what's the use?"

That's the way Mrs. Ed Jennings and her daughter, Marie, of Cullasaja, felt. Notice that the word "feel" is in the past tense, for Mrs. Jennings and Marie have hit the winners' category—not once, but three times recently.

First, Marie won a $10 bill at the Winn-Dixie Store. Then, she won the door prize at the Cullasaja community meeting. Finally, her mother won the home freezer given away by Belk's.

TWO MEN met at a bar. "Say," said the first, "what does your wife say when you're out this late?"

"Nothing," replied the other. "I'm not married."

The first man pondered this for a while and asked: "Then why do you stay out as late as this?"

A DOCTOR with an unusual background applied last week for a position on the staff at Angei Hospital. He is Dr. Harry Weber, originally from Washington, D. C., a surgeon. Doctor Weber said in his application that for two years he has been the personal physician of King Ibn Saud, of Saudia, Arabia.

Anybody got any Arabian diseases?

ALTHOUGH THE atomic bomb is not beyond the conversational range of the gents who hang around the courthouse, those men like best, I think, to talk of subjects such as one they were holding forth on recently: tooth pulling in the old days.

"Why I can remember," said one, as he leaned forward to spit into the stove, "the doc a usin' forge tongs to pull out my teeth. He got hold and we went 'round and 'round. Sometimes, he'd break off one tooth settin' another 'un out."

"Now I don't care what people tell you," said a second man, with a testimonial, "but a little bit of whisky made a tooth pullin' go easier. You could stand the pain better. Of course, if it was one what was likely to hurt a little more, you took just a little more medicine to help you along."

HAVING COME up in the days of novocaine, it was difficult for me to believe the next oldtimer's story but all swore they'd seen the same or worse. He told me of seeing men sit on the patient's legs, arms, and chest while the extraction took place.

All this talk set my wisdom teeth to aching so I left.

HAVE YOU noticed in movies about the Civil War, or King Arthur, or Jesse James, or any other setting that was pre-airplane, that sometimes the camera unintentionally catches a jet vapor trail in the sky? Very jarring, the contrast.

Egg production in the United States in 1956 totaled 5,087 million dozen — 3 per cent more than the 1955 record output.
