RALEIGH—Wildlife protectors in three Western North Carolina districts have been instructed to concentrate on pre-season trout fishermen.

Wildlife protection supervisors from the mountain districts have been told to begin immediately to give attention to these violations on trout waters. Opening day of trout season, the only sport fishing having closed seasons, is April 5.

Clyde P. Patton, executive director of the Wildlife Resources Commission, has stated that prosecution reports indicated that pre-season poaching on trout streams is on the rise. The commission's patrol plane has been assigned to the mountain districts for the crackdown, and will be used to fly over remote streams where the illegal fishing is expected. Two-way, air-ground radio communication will enable protectors to investigate anglers spotted by the airplane, Mr. Patton explained.

The impatient anglers may follow in the wake of hatchery trucks, Mr. Patton noted. The commission's trout hatcheries have already begun distribution of the first trout to be released this year. According to Martin Sullivan, supervisor of trout production, a total of 275,550 large, healthy trout will be stocked during the coming months. This total includes 83,900 brook, 165,650 rainbow, and 26,000 brown trout. Most of the fish will be placed in designated trout waters open to the public at all times during the season, while the remainder will be stocked on refuges where fishing is also open to the public but restricted to certain days. A special mountain trout license is required in addition to the usual fishing license, and receipts from the sale of these licenses are used to operate the hatcheries and protect the trout.

Have you noticed that: Seven out of 10 times, the people with the lowest incomes drive the biggest cars?

Every kid is a brat and a potential juvenile delinquent — except yours?

More women are women-haters than men?

Television commercials are frequently superior to the program they sponsor?

A lot of people seem to have forgotten what it's like to laugh and enjoy living?

Telephone books are so thick they're no longer useful for plugging a hole in a shoe sole?

A nickle isn't much good for anything, except maybe to get an hour on a parking meter?

The fellow with the most schemes for making money usually asks to borrow five?

They usually ask the busiest person to do the biggest job?

Federation Director Renominated

James M. (Jim) Raby, of Franklin, was renominated to a two-year term as a Macon County Farmers Federation director at the farm cooperative's annual county stockholders meeting held on March 6 at the local Federation store.

James McClure Clarke, Farmers Federation president, conducted the meeting and the re-election of the Franklin store committee, to which the stockholders added Mrs. Jack Prady, of Franklin.

Mr. Raby's renomination will be voted upon at the annual meeting of all Farmers Federation stockholders scheduled for the Buncombe County Courthouse in Asheville.

Charles W. Davis, acting general manager, announced that during the period from July 1, 1957, to Dec. 31, 1957, there was a business increase of over $615,000 at all the Farmers Federation stores.

Mr. Davis announced improvements made in the operations of the market department and the poultry division and also stated that plans are being made to expand commercial egg production throughout Western North Carolina. Davis also declared that the purchase of the Franklin Feed Mill would enable the Farmers Federation to render better service to patrons in Macon and surrounding counties.

J. N. Barnette, supervisor of retail stores, told stockholders that each Farmers Federation manager had recently completed an eight-hour course in sales training and management.

Mr. Barnette also described and demonstrated new lines of merchandise now being handled at all the stores.

Tom Fagg, Macon farm agent, announced plans for the 1958 4-H Club Pullet Chain, sponsored by the Farmers Federation.

Other speakers included the Rev. Jack Waldrep, religious department director; Gene Frizzell, local store manager; Fred Hannah, Macon County Federation director; and Max Roberts, educational director.

Winners of free chicks at the meeting were Mr. Raby, Mrs. A. G. Kinsland, Mrs. J. L. Young, and S. A. Knight.

Entertainment was provided by the Farmers Federation String Band and refreshments were served.

Some of us are thinking about organizing a Flame Azalea Festival in June so tourists and others can enjoy the unusual stand of azalea on Wayah.

It could be a real shot in the arm tourist-wise, don't you think?

You do? Then, make it known and let's do something about it long before June arrives.

To the fellow who sent me a letter recently from Atlanta, Ga., in reference to Fred Bulgin tracking sputnik. The title of this column, chum, is "Brady's Blarney", not "Brady's Baloney".

But seriously, Bob Rochester (who signed his letter, "A transplanted Tar Heel"), I'll go along with your theory that the satellite "slowed up all the way around to get a better look at the most beautiful spot on the earth."

Now, Bob, as for the speed of the sputnik etc., I'll let you and Fred iron out the technicalities. I enter a plea of ignorance in this field—and a few others too!

We're still getting those clippings about the bathroom door in the motel.

A friend of Mrs. R. G. Lichtenstein sent her one the other day from a Michigan paper. that advertising it would cost thousands.

You people may not realize it, but if Franklin was paying for Three cheers for the motel without a bathroom door!

FOR 50¢, YOU AND I COULD BRING A LOT MORE TOURISTS TO WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA

- All it would take is
- 10 pieces of stationery
- 10 three cent stamps
- 1 1/2 hours time
- The desire to help bring more prosperity to our area.

Write to ten of your friends anywhere in the U. S. pointing out to them that Western North Carolina is "Vacation Paradise U. S. A." That we have wonderful tourist facilities and that we are glad to have them.

We have about 80,000 households in our region. Ten letters from each household could greatly increase our share of the American tourist dollars that are spent every year. This ad presented as a public service by Heinz Rollman (a man who cannot be bribed), Democratic Candidate for Nomination to Congress in the 12th District of North Carolina.
