

Franklin High Highlights

By Joann Burrell

The senior class last Friday presented a "Class Day" program in the gymnasium for the student body. The purpose of the program was to give the seniors a chance to make their official farewell to the student body of Franklin High School. Acting as master of ceremonies during the program was Edward Shatley, president of the class. Gary Clark read the "Class History", which was written by Frances Barrett and Patricia Hedden. The "Class Prophecy" was written and read by Bill Krickbaum, and Gary McKelvey read the "Last Will and Testament", which was written by Shirley Cruse and Wayne Cole. Mrs. Margaret Flanagan's choral group, which is composed of members of her seventh and eighth grades and high school students, provided music for the program. The "Class Song" was sung by the seniors to the piano accompaniment of Mrs. Henry W. Cabe, who played for the program. This was the first time that a "Class Day" had ever been held at Franklin High School.

After the program, C. K. Olson, Dick Stott, and Mrs. Rose Corbin presented letters to basketball players, football players, and cheerleaders who had earned them this year.

Many congratulations should go to Mrs. Flanagan and her chorus. She and the members of the chorus sacrificed many hours of their time in order to be able to sing at the program. The students in the choral group have missed intramural basketball games and other activities in order to practice almost daily. They are doing a splendid job and are continuing to work on music for the baccalaureate service and commencement exercises.

Seventy-one seniors plan to attend "Senior Day" at Western Carolina College Friday, April 25. These students, along with their sponsor Mrs. Marie P. Stewart,
