Brady's BLARNEY
By A Brady Called J. F.

When our Smoky Mountain Cloggers went to New York City for the Ed Sullivan Show, they found some "home folks" in my brother George and his wife, Grace.
"The New York Bradys" took the Cloggers in hand and gave them a whirlwind tour of The Big City—a chore they say thrilled them even more than it did the Cloggers and their parents. They hit most of the highspots in the short time they had, including a baffling underground subway excursion. George, my brother, prides himself on having learned more about the subway system in his four years in the city than the average New Yorker does in a lifetime. When it comes to finding his way underground, he's like a Beagle hot on the trail of a rabbit. On my lone trip with him below the streets last fall, in five minutes I was completely lost. I owe him my life, because I'm sure I would never have been able to find the light of day alone.
The Cloggers experienced this same feeling when he "showed out" by taking them on the subways.
Last Thursday night, the Cloggers expressed their appreciation to "The New York Bradys" by honoring them at a picnic at Black Rock State Park in Rabun County, Ga.
And from the way the kids talked, I got the feeling they really appreciated George, as I did, for his uncanny ability to stop acting like a mole and return to the human race on the top side of the city.

My favorite aunt has this poem posted conspicuously on the wall in her kitchen:
We have two ends,
With a common link.
With one we sit,
With one we think.
Success depends
On which we use.
Heads we win,
Tails we lose.

There's a big deal brewing now that could be the making of Franklin.
Thanks to V. H. Burt, a summer resident from Miami, Fla., a large flying club in Florida is interested in staging a fly-into Franklin to dig for rubies.
The two-day event, with any luck at all, should attract about 30 to 50 airplanes and about 100 people.

Since it will be the first stunt of its kind (who ever heard of flying some place just to dig for rubies?) Mr. Burt is hiring a photographer for a flying magazine to photograph the fly-in publication.
Like the ruby mining article that appeared in Woman's Day several years back, this will keep the Cowee Ruby Mines alive on a nation-wide scale.
Naturally, on a deal like this, everyone's cooperation is going to be needed. There'll be transportation, food and lodging, and a score of lesser things to be ironed out before September.
Any volunteers to help out?
