Community Meet
R. J. Bryson, rural community development president, called the regular meeting of the organization at the community building Tuesday night, March 15. Attendance was small because of the weather. The next regular meeting is scheduled for April 12 at the community building.

Quarterly Conference
West Macon Circuit Quarterly Conference was held at Louisa Chapel Methodist Church last Sunday, March 20. Frank Smathers, the district superintendent from Waynesville, preached at the morning service and was also in charge of the conference.

M. Y. F. Meeting
Carson M.Y.F. members and adult leaders who attended the Methodist Training School at the Franklin Methodist Church last Sunday night were Steve Cabe, Tommy Sherrill, Lee Garner, Eddie Moses, Brownlow Green, Alda Waldrup, Suzanne Cunningham, Linda Wallace, Mrs. B. L. Sherrill, and R. J. Bryson.

Also, the members and adult leaders attending the M.Y.F. sub-district meeting at Snow Hill Monday night were Lee Garner, Danny Reynolds, Steve Cabe, Tommy Sherrill, Mary Jo Waldrup, Mary Sue Reynolds, Linda Wallace, Jean Dills, Suzanne Cunningham, Mrs. B. L. Sherrill, and R. J. Bryson.

Meeting Tonight
W.S.C.S. will meet with Mrs. George Harold Moore tonight (Thursday).
Carson Home Demonstration

Club met at the home of Mrs. Earl Cabe, president, March 8. Mrs. Florence Sherrill gave a demonstration on fabrics. Mrs. Nellie Cook, a former member of the club, was a visitor. Seven members were present. The hostess served refreshments.

Birthday Dinner
Mrs. W. R. Pressley honored her father, George Wallace, who is 94 years young, with a birthday dinner at her home Sunday, March 20. Sons and daughters who attended the dinner were Mrs. George Stalcup, Mrs. Burnell Waldrup, Mrs. Gilmer Waldrup, Ernest Wallace, and John Wallace. Unable to attend were a daughter, Mrs. T. M. Green, who lives in Detroit, Mich., and a son, Ed Wallace, who was in Wisconsin on business.

Other guests included several of the grandchildren and sons and daughters-in-law. Mr. Wallace has 40 grandchildren and 43 great-grandchildren living.

Personals
Mrs. John P. Cunningham, who spent 10 days in the C. J. Harris Community Hospital in Sylva recently because of a fall at her home, is recuperating at the home of a son, James P. Cunningham.

Brady's BLARNEY
By A Brady Called J. P.

Faith and begorrah, 'twas a sad St. Patrick's Day for this Irishman, whose middle name happens to be that of the patron saint.

And why the sadness? My fellow St. Patrick's Day celebrant, Dr. J. W. Kahn, who holds honorary membership in the wonderful clan, wasn't here to help me mark the wearing of the green.

He's away "up Nawth" on two week's active duty with the U. S. Air Force and I had not a single solitary soul to bend the elbow with in tribute to "Paddy's Day".

Was watching TV the morning of St. Patrick's Day festivities in New York City. They were interviewing people on what they thought of the Irish. (Incidentally, everyone thinks they're wonderful!) A familiar face appeared on the screen and in a voice magnificent with an Irish brogue the man started his praise of those from the Emerald Island.

Who was it? You women who made the trip to the United Nations in New York City last fall will remember him. It was our friend the guide on the cruise boat that took us around Manhattan Island. Small world, isn't it?

Fred Cunningham's five-year-old lad, Milton, put his family into an unusual situation during the big snow storm last week.

A neighbor, Frank Mason, came to the Cunningham's to use the telephone to call about locating some chains for his car so he could get to the drug store to pick up a prescription for an elderly couple ill with flu.

After calling several places, with no luck, Mr. Mason decided to quit.

He turned to Mr. Cunningham and offered to pay for the use of the phone.

Red-headed Milton looked puzzled by this offer and asked Mr. Mason why he offered to pay "when you know you have no money".

After Mr. Mason left, Milton's mother scolded him for being rude to the visitor and saying what he did about not having any money.

"Well Mama, I know he didn't have any money," Milton explained. "Because he called every place in town for some change."

I have to chuckle to myself ever so often about an experience a former highway patrolman had here one time.

He was driving down from Highlands by the back way (Highlands to Dillard) when a foreign sports car zipped past him at a high rate of speed. He gave chase and after several hair-raising miles on the curving road managed to make the driver of the sports car heed his siren and stop.

The situation became more of a problem when he discovered that the driver also was a foreigner and couldn't speak English.

Finally, by gestures and the like, the patrolman made the driver understand that he was going too fast.

The foreigner shook his head in protest and pointed toward a sign on the side of the highway—a sign he mistakenly thought was the speed limit.

The sign caption was "NC 106".

I actually ran into a door and cut my forehead one day last week. It doesn't do any good, however, to tell the truth because that old door bit seems to have been widely used through the years by males to explain away bruises and cuts.

Ed Crawford suggests that I tell anyone who asks how I got it that "it was my wife and my stove-wood, so why worry about it."

Who ever coined the words "dirt cheap" never tried to buy any property in Macon County.
