ance, the Veterans Admistration points out that the premium rates on permanent insurance plans re main constant throughout the life of the policy, but that the prem ium rate on term policies takes : jump every five years.

For this reason, V.A. says vet erans with term policies ought to consider seriously converting their insurance to the permanent plans

The premium rates for perma nent plans of insurance are gen erally higher at the veteran's age of issue that those for term policies issued at those ages. V.A says, however, that while the fiveyear increase in premium rates for term policies are small at a veteran's younger ages, 'they get progressively higher as his age increases. As an example, V.A. says the annual premium on dividend-participating term insurance jump. from $30.78 per $1,000 of insurance at the age of 60 to $47 at age 65. and to $73.16 at age 70. Since a person buys insurance nier to provide for his Family future years, he ought to give pecial thought to his circumstances and costs during the later years of his own life, V.A. says. Performance reports can open ditch drainage: Purchase be made in person by visiting the wool last year are reminded that April 29 is the final date for filing for an application on wool sold last year. The 1959 wool marketing year closed March 31, 1960. This program was authorized by Congress in 1954. It provides an incentive for farmers to increase their production of wool. Since its inception, the program has ac complished a steady increase in wool production. The payment is based on a percentage figure which is applied to the net proceeds from the farmers individual sales. This program has worked to the advantage of the consuming public as well as to wool farmers. Without the program the resulting scarcity would increase consumer prices much more than the amount of payment. The dead line date April 29 is the date by which farmers who sold wool dur-ing the 1959 marketing year must make application for the incentive payment. This application may be made at the county office.
