legislative points, including a bill he co-authored at the last session to eliminate the 12th grade in school and have instead a longer school year of 200 days, instead of the re-quired 180 days.

This bill was defeated in the house, but a substitute measure provided for a study commission to probe the issues and report back to the General Assembly. Mr. Ross is serving as a member of that commission.

The speaker frankly admitted he didn't "know if that is the solution, but it is one avenue that needs exploring."

He also raised the question of using the semester system in Tar Heel schools, instead of quarters, as "another unex-plored avenue".

Not Economical

On the subject of the 180-day school year, as compared with 365 working days in each year, Mr. Ross said from "the stand-

Planning For Local Talent Review In June Under Way

Farmers have received a new warning about the hog cholers situation this spring. Cholera seems to be on the march again. New and severe out breaks occurred in many states, over wide areas, last year. And sow, with the spring season for cholera practically here, we have swine raisers take steps to have their herds protecte against the

The only protection against cholera is to have pigs vaccinated before an outbreak

The farmer's greatest danger lies in a false sense of security with regard to cholera. For upwards of fifteen years, most farmers kept their herds vaccinated. This built resistance in great area depth and outbreaks fell off sharply. Now, many owners seem to have been lulled into taking chances, letting pigs go unvac-cinated. The result was the severe wave of outbreaks which struck last season. And many more of these disastrous outbreaks are expected this spring, as cholera hits

What to do? The important thing is to have every pig vaccinated BEFORE cholera strikes. There is no cure. The only protection is vaccination in advance.

Several types of vaccines now give solid protection against cholera. Which should be used is best left up to the veterinarian. There are several reasons for this. First, all pigs need a checkup before vaccination, to be sure they are in proper condition. Second, local conditions and the condition of the pigs enters into determining which kind of vaccine is best.

Here are some tell-tale signs of cholera to watch for: Slow pigs with a poor appetite, dullness, listlessness, a desire of pigs to stay in their nests, walking with a staggering, weaving gait.

The spring cholera season is here. The producer who values his profits will do well to have his pigs protected without further de-
