Student Writes His Answers To Maconians

(Editor's Note: Franklin's exchange student from Turkey has an excellent writing knowledge of English, having studied it for five years in his native country. However, speaking our language is another thing and he is afraid some have trouble understanding his attempts to answer questions they ask him.)

By ADEM UNAL

I am very glad that I'll be able to answer your questions here. I asked THE FRANKLIN PRESS to let me write and when they accepted my suggestion I was very happy.

I'll try to answer your questions the best I can. By the way, I want to thank THE PRESS very much for giving me this opportunity.

Now, I'll answer your questions. I am always being asked, "How do you like it here?"

I want to say that, as a matter of fact, I like it here very much. As a rule, I have met people who are sympathetic with my problems (and I have had many of them) and people who are willing to help me. I can't say here what I really mean with my poor English. At present, I find it wonderful here.

I'll find it difficult to leave here at the last of the year. When I return to my country, I'll remember this year in the U.S.A. with pleasure the rest of my life.

I am happy to be able to give some knowledge about my country in my next writing.

Autumn's Color Show In W.N.C. Is Getting Ready For Opening

Flashes of crimson and gold in "The Land of the Sky" are signaling the opening of one of the greatest shows on earth: autumn foliage in the mountains of Western North Carolina.

Visitors should keep in mind that the color show moves from high altitudes down the mountain slopes and across the valleys, and that the earlier they visit the mountains, the higher the altitudes they should visit for a preview of the brilliant foliage patterns which decorate the entire region through October and last into November at many points.

Reports from the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Blue Ridge Parkway, and Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests indicate that this will be a good color year with the big show on stage around October 10 at altitudes above 4000 feet and the peak of the general color display beginning around October 15.

"Indications are that the leaf coloration in the Great Smokies will be very good this fall," says Fred J. Overly, superintendent of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Color at higher elevation in the park is expected to be at its best between now and October 15. At lower elevations in the park, peak coloration is usually between October 15 and 25.

Blue Ridge Parkway rangers report splashes of color along the entire parkway between Linville and Asheville, with birches and maples turning, and the vivid red berries of mountain ash outstanding this year at Craggy Gardens and the Wagon Road Gap-Beech Gap section of the parkway. Gum, maples and sourwoods are showing color at altitudes above 3,000 feet along the Parkway between Flowering Rock and the Virginia line.

At Grandfather Mountain, peak coloration is expected between October 10 and 20, while color in the Mount Pisgah area should be nearing its height by October 12.

Some of the best points for viewing color in the Great Smokies right now are higher sections of U. S. 441, the Clingman's Dome Road, and the road between Mile-High Overlook and Heintooqa Overlook. One of the brightest color displays along U. S. 64 through the Sapphire Country at present is between Highlands and Cashiers.
