MARION W. WALL, County Agent

We are in receipt of another nice peach exhibit from Mr. J. F. Hayes, of Carthage. This exhibit is composed of the Red Bird variety and has been placed in preservative for the State Museum.

Hemp Orgaizes

Last Tuesday night the citizens of Hemp organized a Community Club and voted to have a Community Fair on October third. There is much enthusiasm among the citizens of this community and we received many special premiums and advertisements from the business men to make the community fair a success.

Community Club Federate

At a meeting of representatives from six community clubs in the County last Wednesday at Jackson Springs it was decided to federate the entire Community Club organizations of Moore County.

In addition to special meetings of the various clubs it was voted that we have a regular monthly program and the following subjects will be discussed in each community meeting during the following months: July, Sings; September, Agricultural Program; October, Community Fairs; November, Horticulture and Landscape Gardening; December, Farm and Home Comforts

We hope to have a speaker for each of these club meetings for the various programs.

STAY ON THE JOB

In every community, and the community around Vass is no exception there are dozens of farmers who are either getting ready to quit farming entirely or wishing they could. The reason is the extremely low price of farm products and the high cost of implements and fertilizer, as well as clothing, etc. In every period of distress there are always a lot of "summer soldiers" who give up at the first frost. And it is they who help to improve conditions for the man who sticks on the job. There are sure to be hard times in any business, and agriculture is no exception. But the real business man, the real farmer is the one who both looks ahead and prepares ahead. He is the one we depend upon to prevent a calamity, and there are still many of his kind left. So we may safely predict that present conditions will not last long. Brighter days are just ahead. The man who sticks to the job now is the man who will cash in when the improvement comes.

PICNIC TIME

Here's picnic season again, right around the corner. It suggests old puns about ants in the blackberry pie, and sand in the sugar, and all that, but we are not welcoming the season with any such ideas.

We're glad we're back around to picnic time and family reunion weather because it will give Vass citizens who have been more or less housed up for several months a chance to get out and shake hands and renew acquaintance with each other. It means chautauquas and camp-meetings for many communities, and they mean not only entertainment but educational features that are too good to be overlooked. It gives whole families an opportunity to get together and talk over "the good old days," while nothing brings the farmer and the town man into closer touch than a big out-door meeting of some kind, where they can sit beneath the trees, whittle, and talk to their heart's content. They get each others ideas of business conditions; they discuss agriculture and offer each other helpful suggestions, and in this way each learns much that is going to prove valuable later on.

It gives the young people a chance, too, to get their lungs full of good, pure, fresh air, and to show off their new clothes, and to form friendships which will last throughout all the years to come. In fact, everybody benefits from out-door gatherings, no matter where or when they are held. And we can only hope this section will see many picnics and family reunions this season, and that each will be marked by record-breaking attendance.
