

RECORD RECEIPTS AS CO-OPS OPEN

The flood gates of Co-operative Marketing opened last week when 9,000,000 pounds of tobacco from the organized growers of North Carolina and Virginia alone poured into the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association.

Members of the Co-operative in North Carolina delivered 6,000,000 pounds of tobacco—4,500,000 pounds in the old belt and central markets and 1,500,000 pounds in Eastern North Carolina.

The Virginia growers placed 3,250,000 pounds of the weed on 18 co-operative floors within four days time. All the tobacco of 34 grades delivered on the opening day to 24 co-operative markets of the old belt were sold to leading manufacturers before the sun had set on the first day of co-operative marketing in Western North Carolina and Virginia. Other heavy orders have reached the Association since the opening of the old belt markets and according to Richard R. Patterson, manager of the Leaf Department, the Association is selling at figures which are highly satisfactory as compared to the average prices on the auction floors.

With each day's operation the co-operative system runs more smoothly and the enthusiasm of the growers within and without the Association is proven by the fact that 400 contracts of new members reached Raleigh headquarters during the past week, and the number of local organizations of the association has risen to 298 in Western North Carolina.

Most of these locals supply their own detectives to watch for contract breakers, but as yet not a single case of contract breaking in the old belt has been reported to headquarters.

Local organizations of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association are increasing in number throughout Eastern North Carolina, and at a series of meetings held last (Continued on page 7)
