The correspondent wishes to correct an impression which some may get from the statement that "some of our tourists arrived here in the blizzard of January 6th." I should have said "from the blizzard," because a big storm was raging north, and we always get a drop in the temperature here when it is very cold there.

That Knollwood Sale Last Week Tells the Story of Knollwood Prospects

When a new road was begun a few weeks ago to connect Southern Pines and Knollwood Village, and building sites were staked out, and notice was given five days before the sale that a sale would be held, and that sale disposes of some seventy lots at a minimum of $150 a lot in a couple of hours, it is clear that Knollwood Village has the unbounded confidence of people who are figuring on homes and on investment.

Knollwood Village

Will be one of the most favored centers of development in the state and the prices asked now for locations are as cheap comparatively as the prices of twenty dollars an acre that prevailed in the neighborhood five or ten years ago for similar land.

This stuff is moving right along, but prices never move but in one direction. Better make your selection while you have so much to pick from.
