

CAMERON

"The flowers that bloomed in the wildwood, Have since dropped their beautiful leaves, The many dear friends of my childhood, Have lain for years in their graves."

This fragment of an old song was brought to my mind, as I wandered Sunday afternoon through the cemetery at Carthage. I saw the graves of so many dear friends, and acquaintances, whom I had known in days that are past.

It will be a longer time between drinks, when the Governor of South Carolina meets the Governor of North Carolina, when the Clans foregather at Red Springs, than in former times, when the Governor of North Carolina met the Governor of South Carolina, and the decanter stood on the sideboard, replenished from time to time. When time came to part, and each go his respective way, they became so full of love and devotion and generous emotion, they fell upon each others necks or the porch floor, tradition saith not which.
